

Lincoln Police Use Dum-Dums; Should They?

By NANCY HICKS and GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writers

A bullet too deadly... or a dead police officer? The sides are lining up — advocates and critics of a bullet used by the Lincoln police and some Lancaster County sheriff's deputies, but banned by the U.S. Army.

The bullet is a hollow point, which expands upon impact. It is commonly referred to as a dum-dum.

Dum-dums have had a reputation for tearing gaping wounds since the mid-1800s when the British first filed the tips and cut slits in their bullets in their arsenal at Dum Dum, India, for use against charging tribesmen.

Needless Wounding Charged

These bullets cause unnecessary wounding and unnecessary death, according to the American Civil Liberties Union, which has campaigned both nationally and locally against the use of hollow points, an increasingly popular bullet with police agencies.

"The ACLU believes that only the minimum force needed to protect the life of a police officer or that of a third person is proper and reasonable."

Police generally contend that the bullets give them needed extra stopping power than the standard .38-caliber, round-nose bullets do not possess.

The Lincoln police went to the use of the hollow-point bullets after detectives were killed in 1966 and 1967.

The assailants in both cases were wounded by gunshots before killing the two, Paul Whitehead and Glen Soukup.

If the police had been using hollow points, Capt. John Miller said, the men may have been incapacitated by the first shots and the lives of the detectives may have been saved.

Dum-Dums Used Twice

Since their use was instituted, hollow points have been fired at people twice by police officers. One shot, which the department said was fired accidentally, left a man wounded. He was hospitalized for a time and recovered.

Early this year Elijah Childers was killed when he was struck by four hollow point bullets, one of which entered through the top of his head.

The Lincoln police department began using the hollow points at about the same time as many other law enforcement agencies. During the late 1960s, as the killing of police officers rose from about 37 a year nationally to more than 100, police began using hollow points and more powerful handguns, such as .357 magnums.

The bullets are currently used by approximately 25% of the nation's police forces, the FBI, the Secret Service, the Internal Revenue Service, and the U.S. Customs.

And in the Lancaster County sheriff's office, where deputies choose their own firepower, many of the patrol deputies pack the .357 magnums and some use hollow point bullets.

Nebraska State Patrol troopers also carry the high-powered .357 magnum pistol, but use round nose, jacketed bullets, which do not expand.

Not All Policemen Agree

And not every police department agrees with the use of the expanding bullets.

Los Angeles Police Chief Edward Davis opposes the hollow points on the grounds of self-interest.

More than 50% of police officers who are shot are shot by their own weapons, Davis said. He doesn't want to see his men being shot with hollow points.

In Baltimore during late 1974, an officer was forced to resign for using hollow point ammunition against departmental regulations when he shot and killed a 15-year-old.

But generally police justify the use of hollow points on the grounds that they knock an assailant down quickly.

Police concede that a shot to the heart or head, even with a round nose bullet, will stop an assailant.

But a pistol, especially under emergency conditions, is hard to fire accurately. Police say the hollow point gives them knockout power when it hits other part of the body.

Knockdown power, the experts say, comes from hydrostatic shock. When a bullet enters the body it sets up a shock wave in tissue — which is about 70% water. This shock wave is transferred to muscles, nerves and blood vessels.

This effect is what incapacitates a person, experts say.

A .38-caliber (and .45-caliber) round nose bullet, fired into a plastic jug of water, passes through, jarring it. A .38-caliber hollow point blows it up, spraying water in a 10-to-15-foot radius.

This indicates that, at least in a bucket of water, the hollow point is very powerful.

But controversy ranges around the effect of a hollow point in the human body, especially when fired from a pistol at half to a quarter the speed of a rifle bullet.

No Big Difference Seen

At least one expert, frequently quoted by the police, says that there is no discernible difference in the wound caused by round-nose and hollow point .38-caliber pistol bullets.

What the experts do agree on is that the evaluation of bullet destructiveness is very complex, and that factors such as bullet speed, shape, and size all need to be considered.

While the experts debate, the police and civil libertarians continue their pro and con arguments.

Since hollow points flatten on impact, they tend not to ricochet or whiz through things with enough speed to kill an assailant and a bystander behind him, supporters contend.

Hollow points make it more likely that a bystander will be killed or injured if an officer's shot strikes him mistakenly, opponents reply.

Newly elected Mayor Helen Boosalis says she intends to review the police use of hollow point bullets. "I've heard the statements of the ACLU," said Mayor Boosalis. Now she wants to find out the police department's defense of the bullets and weigh the two sides.

Whatever the actual merits of hollow points, the departmental policy on the use of firearms rather than the type of ammunition used is most important, according to Capt. Miller.

The Lincoln police policy is that an officer shall not fire his weapon unless his life or the life of another person is in danger.

And the policy does not permit officers to fire warning shots or to fire at suspected fleeing felons, Miller pointed out.

"Lincoln police do not want to shoot anyone," he said.

American Captive Released

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Leftist guerrillas from Zaire released a young American woman unharmed but in shock from six days of wilderness captivity Sunday, and began bargaining over the fate of three other hostages.

The guerrillas freed Barbara Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., before dawn on the Tanzania shore a mile from Kigoma, a Lake Tanganyika port. American diplomats quoted her as saying the others — Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif., Kenneth Stephen Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., and Emilie van Zinnick Bergman of Holland — were in good condition.

The diplomats said Miss Smuts carried sealed letters from the guerrillas to the Tanzanian government and to Beverly Carter, U.S. ambassador in Tanzania. Contents of the letters were not disclosed but diplomats said they presumably set conditions for the release of the other captives.

The Americans and the Dutch woman were seized by 40 armed and uniformed guerrillas who came in a boat 35 miles across the lake from Zaire and terrorized the camp for three hours last Monday night.

The station has since been closed to white foreigners who were targets of the attack by suspected members of the Popular Revolution party, a little-known Marxist group opposed to Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko and his ties with the United States.

Miss Smuts was flown 700 miles on Sunday afternoon from Kigoma to Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital.

"I'm very tired but I am all right," Miss Smuts told friends. "They treated us as well as could be expected. I don't want to say any more because I might endanger the lives of the others."

Miss Smuts declined to be interviewed in Kigoma. American diplomats said she was "in a bit of shock after a pretty grueling trip overnight" across the lake from Zaire.

The blonde Miss Smuts, wearing jeans and a shirt, was helped into a chartered light plane at Kigoma by fellow students Larry Goldman, 31, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Michelle Trudeau, 24, New York City. They flew with her to Dar es Salaam.

U.S. diplomats quoted Miss Smuts as saying she was brought across the lake by several guerrillas in a boat and left on the shore about 5 a.m. Sunday. She walked a mile into Kigoma and turned herself over to Tanzanian police.

U.S. diplomats said Miss Smuts was "emotionally wrought up and unable to answer police questions." The Americans sent her to the home of Alice Todd, a missionary's wife from Kansas, where she had a big breakfast of eggs, canned meat, grits and toast. She slept for several hours.

"They apparently kept her in a village or in an encampment of some sort," said Hal Lucius, economic officer at the U.S. Embassy in Dar es Salaam. He and Lewis MacFarlane, consul on Zanzibar, were sent to Kigoma to help in the search.

At Kigoma, the American diplomats set up a radio transmitter in an effort to establish regular links to embassies in neighboring countries.

Regional Tanzanian Police Commander Michael Lugwisha said a police helicopter and up to 250 troops, police and militia searched a 180-mile stretch of shore around Kigoma.

Lugwisha said the raiders wore khaki fatigues and caps with badges. They sneaked across the lake to Gombe and back again last Monday in a 40-foot motorboat without being noticed by the hundreds of fishermen whose lantern-lit boats dot the water at night.

Israeli Raiders Clash With Lebanese Troops

By The Associated Press

Israeli raiders searching for guerrillas in southern Lebanon clashed with Lebanese troops Sunday, and a senior Israeli officer said it was the stiffest battle between army regulars of the two countries in three years.

A Lebanese Defense Ministry communiqué announcing that the fighting had ended said seven Lebanese were killed and three were wounded, two of them critically. It also said five Israeli soldiers were killed, but the Israelis reported their losses as two killed and one wounded.

The battle erupted near the village of Aita al-Chaab, three miles inside Lebanon and 15 miles southeast of Tyre.

The patrol lost contact with the base when the radio man was killed, he said. Reinforcements were sent in and when Lebanese artillery gunners began firing, Israeli air support was sent in to silence it, he said.

Residents of Aita al-Chaab who said they witnessed the fighting from their hilltop stone houses said two Lebanese soldiers guarding a border post opened fire when two men refused to heed their repeated orders to halt and identify themselves.

"The two men turned out to be Israeli soldiers... They were killed at once," said one villager.

"Suddenly," he said, "hundreds of Israelis appeared and opened machinegun fire on the post, killing the two soldiers who fired and five more who were in pajamas inside a single-room stone structure." One soldier of the unit escaped.

Lebanese artillery positions opened concentrated fire on the Israeli raiders who retreated leaving the corpses of their two fellows, the villagers said.

"Fierce artillery duels ensued and the Israelis came back at 10:30 a.m. (2:30 a.m. CDT) and took away the two corpses, while screaming jets dropped bombs in the vicinity."

"Before leaving the village, the Israelis scattered boobytrapped cigarette packs, wallets and aftershave lotion tins around the seven corpses of the Lebanese soldiers," they said.

The Israeli spokesman said he did not believe the battle with the Lebanese army — the worst clash since September 1972 — was a sign of a change of policy by the new Lebanese military government toward Israeli patrols in Lebanon. "I don't think they had any intention to aggravate the situation" along Israel's northern border, he said.

He said the patrol was "a routine procedure into Lebanon to look for terrorist preparations." He said the encounter with the Lebanese force was "accidental, unintentional."

The Israelis frequently patrol inside Lebanon territory in search of guerrilla concentrations and the Lebanese army usually does not interfere.

Israeli Chief of Staff Mordechai Gur, speaking on television, said that during the fighting the Israelis sent a message to Beirut through the United Nations that the operation was not directed against the Lebanese army. After the message was received the Lebanese forces withdrew from the battle, Gur said.

Sen. Carl Curtis, he said, has supported the immigration of Vietnamese refugees but "hasn't done one damn thing that's constructive" for Dr. Nossa. "All we have gotten is lip service," he said.

The Israelis searched several houses for guerrilla suspects during the patrol. It was the second time in two weeks Israeli patrols had searched the village. The operation lasted 12 hours, the spokesman said.

Police Station Trip No Longer Required

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Shoplifters are sometimes being treated like speeders under an experimental procedure instituted recently by police.

They are given a ticket and freed to go on their way without a trip to the police station, if the arresting officer and his commander don't see any need to haul the suspect in.

The procedure was instituted without fanfare about two months ago under a state law which took effect late last year.

The law allows any officer to issue a citation for misdemeanors, violations of city ordinances, as well as traffic infractions.

Decision Up To Officer

Lt. Clifton Koch stressed that the state law leaves the decision on whether a person should be released in the field to the discretion of the officer.

Inspector Dean Leitner said he has no figures on how many people have been released in the field under the new program.

But he said most shoplifting suspects are being released in the field. More than 100 have been arrested since the program began.

At this point the program involves only those misdemeanors which are processed in Municipal Court. This eliminates some misdemeanors which go through County Court.

Of the crimes involved in the program, the department has specified 18 in which the suspect will still probably be mugged and printed at police headquarters.

The new form is being used for all misdemeanor cases heard in Municipal Court, not merely those in which the suspect is released.

Less Friction Results

Another reason he likes it, he said, is that, since defendants and officers have to spend less time together, there is less friction between them.

Americans Returning To Pre-Gasoline Crisis Getaway Habits

By The Associated Press

From the East Coast to the West, Americans appear to be returning to their old getaway habits during the first major good-weather holiday since the gasoline crisis abated.

"You'd never know there was anything like an energy crisis," said a dispatcher at the Virginia Beach, Va., Police Department. Police said there were a lot more cars in the beach community this year than last and the town, a major Eastern Seaboard resort, was packed with tourists.

An Associated Press sampling of resort areas indicated that except where weather was a problem, travel was up from Memorial Day last year.

There were no reports of gasoline shortages around the nation.

The National Safety Council — noting that traffic deaths were up 5% during the first three months of this year compared with 1974 gasoline-shortage levels — predicted between 400 and 500 persons will die in holiday traffic accidents. Last year 392 died.

Record crowds of 60,000 to 100,000 were reported at the Colorado River near Blythe, Calif., most coming from Los Angeles area. Six persons drowned.

Officials said between 350,000 to 500,000 people had turned out for the Indianapolis 500 despite a heat wave that had caused several cases of heat prostration. They were unable to say how the crowds compared with last year because all estimates are just guesses.

Crowds at North Carolina's Outer Banks beaches, including Cape Hatteras National Seashore, forced the posting of no vacancy signs at lodges. Some travelers were forced to go 60 miles inland to Elizabeth City, and motels there were close to overflowing.

Last year many beach motels had vacancies, said John Roberts, night manager of the Swamp Fox in Myrtle Beach.

More than 7,000 persons, some from as far away as Florida and Michigan, turned out for a three-day fair of campers at Watkins Glen, N.Y. Promoter Jim Kaser said the people turned out for the fair because they "want a chance to enjoy themselves outdoors and to get personally involved in all kinds of recreational and hobby activities rather than sit in their living rooms watching other people stage the entertainment."

In Key West, Fla., T.H. Latimer, manager of the Blue Marlin Motel, said, "We've been running about 95% full since before Christmas. It looks like it's going to be a real good summer this year." He added that last year ran about three-quarters full because of the gas shortage "and they couldn't get down to us."

Max Madorsky, manager of the Voyager Beach Motel in Daytona Beach, Fla., which is booked solid this week, said, "I think it is a little more than just the gas shortage improvement. People are tired of staying home."

Roy Rickard, of the Casa Del Mar in Daytona Beach, adds, "They're traveling to Florida because they can travel in their own cars. We've got a lot of Atlanta people here, Georgia people, people from the Carolinas."

In Wyoming, resort operators at Grand Teton National Park, said reservations are up 21% from last year. But the weather kept it from being a busy Memorial Day weekend, according to park spokesman Tony Benetto. He said there's still several feet of snow at some higher spots in the park.

"The concessionaires say if the weather lets go, it will be a busy, busy year," he said, noting that gasoline appeared to be no problem.

Despite record snow levels at Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks, their campgrounds were reported near capacity. Stephen Hamm, Yellowstone reservations supervisor, said, "I think we're up a little bit, but not a tremendous amount. Considering we're not completely open, we're operating at pretty much capacity."

Heavy traffic was reported during the first two days of the holiday on Wyoming roads, the Kansas Turnpike, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Georgia and Oregon roads. But Wisconsin and Colorado traffic levels were about the same as last year.

In Connecticut and Massachusetts, police radar units were ordered out to enforce the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit. By Saturday night they had issued 350 speeding tickets in Connecticut.

Officials said traffic was bumper-to-bumper going to Cape Cod both Saturday and Sunday. But plenty of gas was available. The cape was crowded with holiday weekenders.

The Automobile Club of Michigan said most lower Michigan parks were full of campers, and the club believes Michigan motorists will be traveling 707 million miles over the three-day weekend. That would equal the record set in 1973.

In the Lake of the Ozarks area in southwest Missouri, traffic was reported to be the heaviest in memory. Despite overcast skies and the threat of rain, bumper-to-bumper traffic was reported from Bagnall Dam to Camdenton, 15 miles away on Sunday.

At Ocean Shores, Wash., a 150-mile drive from metropolitan Seattle, a resort spokeswoman said, "The story is it's a hell of a lot busier this year."

At Ocean City, Md., where as many as 200,000 showed up. But officials blamed the low turnout on cloudy, drizzly weather and ocean water temperatures in the 40s and low 50s. There also was confusion over the federal and state observance of Memorial Day. The state doesn't celebrate it until Friday.

Kennel operators in Spokane, Wash., said their pens were full up with pets left behind by residents who didn't want to take Fido along.

Cabinet Collapse Near

Beirut, Lebanon — Facing solid opposition from Moslems and parliamentary forces, Lebanon's military cabinet was near collapse Sunday. President Suleiman Franjeh was under heavy pressure from other Arab governments, from Algeria to Kuwait, to restore a cabinet with parliamentary support.

Soviets, Communists Drifting

Paris — At meetings in France and Austria, two groups of leading European Socialists took contradictory stands on working with Communists, and appeared to be drifting into rival factions. Socialist leaders from southern Europe ended their weekend meeting in southwestern France with a plan to call a formal conference of their parties later this year. The prime purpose seemed to be support for Mario Soares, the Portuguese Socialist leader.

Smuggling Operation Discovered

San Diego — Customs officials have uncovered an international smuggling operation using German and Mexican connections that supplies cancer sufferers in the United States and Canada with large quantities of a drug generally known as laetrile that has been outlawed in both countries as a worthless nostrum. Quantities coming from Mexico are said to exceed in volume the Mexican brown heroin reaching addicts in this country. Laetrile is manufactured from apricot pits and is rich in cyanide.

Ford Defining Goals

Washington — Nine months after taking office, President Ford, who did not have time to develop a national platform, has begun defining the goals he would like the nation to endorse. As described in the White House, they are essentially conservative goals, including two high-priority programs. The first will deal with crime control and call for mandatory imprisonment of repeating offenders. The second contains a series of proposals to curb the rapid growth of federal spending on social programs, including food stamps, veterans' benefits, Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and government pensions.

Prepayment Plan Asked

New York — The New York City Council will consider Tuesday a bill proposed by Mayor Abraham D. Beame that would encourage the prepayment of real estate taxes due in August by offering property owners a "certificate of deposit" with an interest yield that could be applied only to the payment of future tax bills. The measure is intended to ease the city's $1 billion cash-flow crisis.

Total Fertility Rate Hits Record Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau reported Sunday that the birth rate statistic designed to indicate whether the future population will shrink or grow dropped last year to a record low.

It was the third year in a row that the statistic, the total fertility rate, has been below the level at which births and deaths balance.

And it came despite the first increase in four years in the nation's total number of births, which was reported by the National Center for Health Statistics in February.

But the analyst who prepared the census report said that because of the convergence of several relatively recent factors affecting family formation and child-rearing decisions it's too early yet to tell whether the drop foreshadows a permanent decline in the birth rate. It could be a temporary dip which will be balanced by a later surge.

The speed at which the drop occurred suggests that postponement, rather than abandonment, of child-bearing was the cause, said Campbell Gibson.

Separate census surveys showing women of child-bearing age are still planning an average of a little more than two children apiece during their lifetimes suggest that current birth rates are below what the long-term trend will be. The current total fertility rate means every woman would have an average

Americans Returning To Pre-Gasoline Crisis Getaway Habits

By The Associated Press

From the East Coast to the West, Americans appear to be returning to their old getaway habits during the first major good-weather holiday since the gasoline crisis abated.

"You'd never know there was anything like an energy crisis," said a dispatcher at the Virginia Beach, Va., Police Department. Police said there were a lot more cars in the beach community this year than last and the town, a major Eastern Seaboard resort, was packed with tourists.

An Associated Press sampling of resort areas indicated that except where weather was a problem, travel was up from Memorial Day last year.

There were no reports of gasoline shortages around the nation.

The National Safety Council — noting that traffic deaths were up 5% during the first three months of this year compared with 1974 gasoline-shortage levels — predicted between 400 and 500 persons will die in holiday traffic accidents. Last year 392 died.

Record crowds of 60,000 to 100,000 were reported at the Colorado River near Blythe, Calif., most coming from Los Angeles area. Six persons drowned.

Officials said between 350,000 to 500,000 people had turned out for the Indianapolis 500 despite a heat wave that had caused several cases of heat prostration. They were unable to say how the crowds compared with last year because all estimates are just guesses.

Crowds at North Carolina's Outer Banks beaches, including Cape Hatteras National Seashore, forced the posting of no vacancy signs at lodges. Some travelers were forced to go 60 miles inland to Elizabeth City, and motels there were close to overflowing.

Last year many beach motels had vacancies, said John Roberts, night manager of the Swamp Fox in Myrtle Beach.

More than 7,000 persons, some from as far away as Florida and Michigan, turned out for a three-day fair of campers at Watkins Glen, N.Y. Promoter Jim Kaser said the people turned out for the fair because they "want a chance to enjoy themselves outdoors and to get personally involved in all kinds of recreational and hobby activities rather than sit in their living rooms watching other people stage the entertainment."

In Key West, Fla., T.H. Latimer, manager of the Blue Marlin Motel, said, "We've been running about 95% full since before Christmas. It looks like it's going to be a real good summer this year." He added that last year ran about three-quarters full because of the gas shortage "and they couldn't get down to us."

Max Madorsky, manager of the Voyager Beach Motel in Daytona Beach, Fla., which is booked solid this week, said, "I think it is a little more than just the gas shortage improvement. People are tired of staying home."

Roy Rickard, of the Casa Del Mar in Daytona Beach, adds, "They're traveling to Florida because they can travel in their own cars. We've got a lot of Atlanta people here, Georgia people, people from the Carolinas."

In Wyoming, resort operators at Grand Teton National Park said reservations are up 21% from last year. But the weather kept it from being a busy Memorial Day weekend, according to park spokesman Tony Benetto. He said there's still several feet of snow at some higher spots in the park.

"The concessionaires say if the weather lets go, it will be a busy, busy year," he said, noting that gasoline appeared to be no problem.

Despite record snow levels at Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks, their campgrounds were reported near capacity. Stephen Hamm, Yellowstone reservations supervisor, said, "I think we're up a little bit, but not a tremendous amount ... Considering we're not completely open, we're operating at pretty much capacity."

Heavy traffic was reported during the first two days of the holiday on Wyoming roads, the Kansas Turnpike, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Georgia and Oregon roads. But Wisconsin and Colorado traffic levels were about the same as last year.

In Connecticut and Massachusetts, police radar units were ordered out to enforce the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit. By Saturday night they had issued 350 speeding tickets in Connecticut.

At Ocean City, Md., where as many as 200,000 people had been expected, fewer than 100,000 showed up. But officials blamed the low turnout on cloudy, drizzly weather and ocean water temperatures in the 40s and low 50s. There also was confusion over the federal and state observance of Memorial Day. Sky-Watchers Get Free Entertainment

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

Our ancestors would have been astonished. Most of the houses in town were dark early Sunday morning. Only a few were still alive with light, their occupants on the front lawn with heads turned skyward, responding to some primeval attraction to the heavens.

What they saw was the moon. Not the moon we usually see, but the moon with a piece gone. The moon with earth's darkness superimposed. A total lunar eclipse.

One Thought An Omen

In ancient times, the sight of the moon being mysteriously eaten out of the sky was enough to send entire civilizations scurrying for the temples. Eclipses were treated as divine warnings, punishment for sins.

Sunday morning, the eclipse was treated as entertainment, something just enough out of the ordinary to be interesting.

Families formed human constellations on their lawns. Backyard astronomers peered at the moon through metal eyes. Couples made special trips to local lakes for a better view.

And a lot of people went right on sleeping.

Eclipse Total At Midnight

The earth's shadow began creeping across the full moon at 11:01 p.m. By midnight, the moon was in total eclipse, not blacked out completely, but dark in the center with light around the edges. By 1:30 a.m., it was over.

The sun-earth-moon combination put on a show that drew the expected oohs, aahs and look-at-thats. But the rather lengthy performance — something the celestial actors can hardly be blamed for — sent much of the audience heading for bed after only a few minutes.

When you've seen part of a lunar eclipse, you've seen it all.

Fascination Continues

But for some, the fascination and mystery of an eclipse did not die with the birth of knowledge.

"What did you say causes it, again?" a woman asked her husband.

"Well, it happens when the moon goes behind . . . no, it's when the earth passes between . . . I'm not really sure."

That's all right. Two thousand years ago, they weren't sure either.

Silver Orb Becomes Burning Orange Hole

By The Associated Press

The earth cast its shadow over the moon Saturday night and early Sunday turning the silver orb into an burning orange hole in the dark night for those who could see it.

Atlanta, Ga., and Seattle, Wash., were among the cities reporting excellent conditions for viewing the eclipse of the earth's satellite, but much of the northeastern quarter of the nation was blanked from the view by clouds, fog and rain.

The eclipse began around midnight EDT and lasted until about 3:30 a.m. The period of total eclipse was from 1:03 a.m. until 2:33 a.m.

Eclipse 'Neat'

"I think it's neat," said Army Pfc. Carrie Hanks in Atlanta. "They ought to do it every year."

Another late night reveler in Atlanta observed, "It looks like orange sherbet. Maybe we ought to pitch a tent and watch it all night."

The West Coast also seemed to have gotten a good view of the

Woman Drowns While Watching Moon's Eclipse

Bullfrog Basin Marina, Utah (AP) — A New Mexico woman, trying to catch a glimpse of a lunar eclipse, fell overboard from a boat and apparently drowned, the National Park Service reported Sunday.

Park Service spokesman Rich Ward in Page, Ariz., said Linda Hudseeth, 30, of Santa Fe, was reported to have fallen from a 17-foot boat late Saturday night.

He said the woman's husband, Bob, searched for her, then reported to park rangers that she was missing.

Wayne County Farmers Can Get Disaster Loans

Farmers and ranchers in Wayne County who sustained damage to real estate and other property as a result of the tornado, excessive rain and windstorm of May 6 may be eligible for federal emergency loans.

Kenneth L. Bowen, state director of the Farmers Home Administration, said loan money is available and the loans would be based on actual losses.

Applications for assistance will be received up to July 21 for physical losses and until Feb. 24, 1976, for crop losses.

Emergency loan money may be used to repair, restore or replace damaged or destroyed farm or ranch real property and chattel property, Bowen said.

The loans are repayable in their entirety at an interest rate of 5%.

Bowen said further information and application forms may be obtained by contacting the local Farmers Home Administration county supervisor in Wayne.

Districts Ease Requirements For Students

Omaha (AP) — Residency requirements of the Omaha, District 66 and Ralston School Districts will be relaxed for students whose families were displaced by the May 6 tornado, spokesmen said.

Officials said they will be liberal in considering the requests that children be allowed to attend their original schools tuition-free even if they are living temporarily in another school district.

They said, however, that parents must show some "evidence" they plan either to rebuild in the original area or to purchase or rent dwellings in the original district.

NETV Panel Will Honor Ex-Members

Newly appointed members of the Nebraska Educational Television (NETV) Commission will meet with retiring commissioners at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The public meeting will be in the board room of the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd.

Retiring commissioners to be recognized are Joseph E. Marsh of Dodge, Dr. Brendan J. McDonald, Kearney State College President; Chairman James M. McGaffin of WOW-TV in Omaha; Vice chairman John C. Prasch, Lincoln Public Schools superintendent, and Mrs. Lawrence Richter of Kearney.

Dr. Phillip Heckman, president of Doane College in Crete, and Mrs. June Popken of Brady were re-appointed to the board, to serve with permanent members Anne Campbell, Nebraska education commissioner, and NU President D.B. Varner, represented by NU Executive Vice President Steven Sample.

New NETV Commission officers will be elected and committee appointments made, as new members join the board: Mrs. Dorothy Obbink of Lincoln, Al Gilmore of Omaha, Don Conrad of Blair, Dr. Ed Nelson of Chadron and Jim Johnson of Kearney.

Commission secretary Jack McBride, NETV general manager, said other agenda items include reports by network assistant general managers for programming and operation, and by the network development officer.

Junior Hereford Field Day Slated

Davey (AP) — Members of the Nebraska Junior Hereford Association have announced plans to stage their annual field day at Milray Herefords Saturday, June 14.

The traditional horned Hereford breeding cattle judging contest will be held during the morning. Featured speaker during the afternoon program will be B.C. Snidow, assistant secretary of the American Hereford Association.

Wynot Got Name Like Why Did

Wynot (AP) — If there can be a Why in Arizona, why not a Wynot in Nebraska?

There is.

And while Why, a town of around 90 this time of year, came into being 25 years ago, the northeast Nebraska town with the name that sounds like a rhetorical response actually preceded the Arizona query by almost 50 years.

Why natives trace their town's name to the question posed when postal officials said they couldn't name their trailer court and campground settlement Rocky Point Junction. Postal officials contend there were already too many junctions in the country.

Local lore in Wynot has it that the name came from an elderly German man who originally owned the land on which the town was built.

Rose Boeckman, 75, said a meeting was called to name the new town and several names were proposed, but the old German gent had his favorite and kept asking "V not, 'v not, V not?" accept his choice.

The refrain sparked one settler to respond, "That's an idea. Why not call it Wynot," Mrs. Boeckman said.

So the new Nebraska town, which now boasts a population of 240, became Wynot. Why not?

Newcomers Signed

Hollywood (UPI) — Warner Bros. signed newcomers Irene Cara, Lonette McKee and Dwan Smith to star as a rhythm-and-blues group in "Sparkle."

Joint Jail-Reformatory Urged

Omaha (AP) — A member of the Douglas County Board has proposed that the county do away with plans for building a corrections center and consider locating it with a new state reformatory.

Albert said it makes sense to cooperate with the state in a site for a state reformatory in Omaha.

Last week the legislature overrode Gov. J. James Exon's veto of a bill providing $4 million for a reformatory in Omaha and $5 million for a reformatory in Lincoln. They would replace the existing reformatory in Lincoln.

State Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha, who co-sponsored the two-reformatory bill, said he believed the joint site proposal was "valuable and worth exploring."

The county paid $1.1 million for a square block of property at 17th and Leavenworth Streets for a corrections site last year. The land has been cleared.

The county already owns land at 156th and Maple Streets, and Albert said eight to 10 acres was available for building.

He said if the state spends $4 million for a reformatory and the county $7.5 million for a corrections center, there may be some duplication of effort.

"I would certainly be against any recommendation to change the site," said Buglewicz.

Silver Orb Becomes Burning Orange Hole

By The Associated Press

The earth cast its shadow over the moon Saturday night and early Sunday turning the silver orb into an burning orange hole in the dark night for those who could see it.

Atlanta, Ga., and Seattle, Wash., were among the cities reporting excellent conditions for viewing the eclipse of the earth's satellite, but much of the northeastern quarter of the nation was blanked from the view by clouds, fog and rain.

The eclipse began around midnight EDT and lasted until about 3:30 a.m. The period of total eclipse was from 1:03 a.m. until 2:33 a.m.

Eclipse 'Neat'

"I think it's neat," said Army Pfc. Carrie Hanks in Atlanta. "They ought to do it every year."

Another late night reveler in Atlanta observed, "It looks like orange sherbet. Maybe we ought to pitch a tent and watch it all night."

The West Coast also seemed to have gotten a good view of the

Woman Drowns While Watching Moon's Eclipse

Bullfrog Basin Marina, Utah (AP) — A New Mexico woman, trying to catch a glimpse of a lunar eclipse, fell overboard from a boat and apparently drowned, the National Park Service reported Sunday.

Park Service spokesman Rich Ward in Page, Ariz., said Linda Hudseeth, 30, of Santa Fe, was reported to have fallen from a 17-foot boat late Saturday night.

He said the woman's husband, Bob, searched for her, then reported to park rangers that she was missing.

Omaha (AP) — Residency requirements of the Omaha, District 66 and Ralston School Districts will be relaxed for students whose families were displaced by the May 6 tornado, spokesmen said.

Thin layers of clouds distorted the view of the eclipse from Kansas City making the moon ash.

Officials said they will be liberal in considering the requests that children be allowed to attend their original schools tuition-free even if they are living temporarily in another school district.

They said, however, that parents must show some "evidence" they plan either to rebuild in the original area or to purchase or rent dwellings in the original district.

NETV Panel Will Honor Ex-Members

Newly appointed members of the Nebraska Educational Television (NETV) Commission will meet with retiring commissioners at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The public meeting will be in the board room of the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd.

Retiring commissioners to be recognized are Joseph E. Marech of Dodge, Dr. Brendan J. McDonald, Kearney State College President; Chairman James M. McGaffin of WOW-TV in Omaha; Vice chairman John C. Prasch, Lincoln Public Schools superintendent, and Mrs. Lawrence Richter of Kearney.

Dr. Phillip Heckman, president of Doane College in Crete, and Mrs. June Popken of Brady were re-appointed to the board, to serve with permanent members Anne Campbell, Nebraska education commissioner, and NU President D.B. Varner, represented by NU Executive Vice President Steven Sample.

New NETV Commission of fers will be elected and committee appointments made, as new members join the board: Mrs. Dorothy Obbink of Lincoln, Al Gilmore of Omaha, Don Conrad of Blair, Dr. Ed Nelson of Chadron and Jim Johnson of Kearney.

Commission secretary Jack McBride, NETV general manager, said other agenda items include reports by network assistant general managers for programming and operation, and by the network development officer.

Davey (AP) — Members of the Nebraska Junior Hereford Association have announced plans to stage their annual field day at Milray Herefords Saturday, June 14.

The traditional horned Hereford breeding cattle judging contest will be held during the morning. Featured speaker during the afternoon program will be B.C. Snidow, assistant secretary of the American Hereford Association.

Wynot Got Name Like Why Did

Wynot (AP) — If there can be a Why in Arizona, why not a Wynot in Nebraska?

There is.

And while Why, a town around 90 this time of year, came into being 25 years ago, the northeast Nebraska town with the name that sounds like a rhetorical response actually preceded the Arizona query by almost 50 years.

Why natives trace their town's name to the question posed when postal officials said they couldn't name their trailer court and campground settlement Rocky Point Junction. Postal officials contend there were already too many junctions in the country.

Local lore in Wynot has it that the name came from an elderly German man who originally owned the land on which the town was built.

Rose Boeckman, 75, said a meeting was called to name the new town, and several names were proposed, but the old German gent had his favorite and kept asking "V'not, 'v'not, V'not?" accept his choice.

The refrain sparked one settler to respond, "That's an idea. Why not call it Wynot," Mrs. Boeckman said.

So the new Nebraska town, which now boasts a population of 240, became Wynot.

Why not?

Joint Jail-Reformatory Urged

Omaha (AP) — A member of the Douglas County Board has proposed that the county do away with plans for building a corrections center and consider locating it with a new state reformatory.

Commissioner Michael Albert said changing the site of the center from the downtown area would have little effect on the corrections program, because little has been done so far.

Board Chairman George Buglewicz, who has been at odds with Albert on corrections, called the proposal "foolhardy." He said it has weaknesses.

The county paid $1.1 million for a square block of property at 17th and Leavenworth Streets for a corrections site last year. The land has been cleared.

The county already owns land at 156th and Maple Streets, and Albert said eight to 10 acres was available for building.

He said if the state spends $4 million for a reformatory and the county $7.5 million for a corrections center, there may be some duplication of effort.

"I would certainly be against any recommendation to change the site," said Buglewicz.

So, Define An Alcoholic

We defy anyone to accurately define the scope of LB237, the so-called alcoholism rehabilitation bill, passed by the Legislature before adjournment last Friday.

The bill is ripe for gubernatorial veto and we hope Gov. Exon still has a sharp red pencil.

Originally, as we understand it, the measure was to have provided for a detoxification program while at the same time eliminating statutes or local ordinances which make it a crime to simply be drunk in public.

The latter provision was dropped because of opposition by law enforcement officials. Bill sponsor Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln says he will fight for reinstatement of that provision when the Legislature meets next year.

One of the tragedies of the 1975 session for Sen. Barnett — who had an excellent session overall and who carried the ball admirably on some tough and unpopular social legislation — was that key provisions were gutted from a couple of the important bills he sponsored. One such was LB237, where he wound up with less than half a loaf.

The intent of the Legislature in passing an alcoholism treatment bill apparently was that alcoholism should be treated rather than punished. Otherwise, why pass an alcoholism treatment bill? Why not just increase the penalties for being drunk?

Under the new legislation, the Unicameral is committing almost a million dollars to an imprecise program which could find the hopeless drunk in jail again — where he can't be helped — and the infrequent drunk at a detoxification center, where he or she could be held for up to 24 hours, longer than the police normally hold a drunk, and where he or she probably doesn't belong.

We don't think the problem has received the proper attention and in-depth investigation. The legislation as approved appears to have opened up a can of worms as far as the arrest and subsequent handling of public intoxicants. There appears to be fertile ground for civil liberties lawsuits inherent in the bill. The key provision — removing the stigma of intoxication as criminal conduct — has been sidetracked.

We hate to see the state spend time, money and effort on what appears to be an unpromising program.

In Search Of A Balance

Just at a time U.S. moderates are earning high marks for warning decidedly pro-Israeli American congressmen to cool it, the Soviet Union threatens to upset the balance of forces in the Middle East by cozying up to what is probably the most militant Arab state.

The Russians and Libya last week announced an agreement under which the Soviets will set up military air, land and naval bases in Libya. The agreement also provides that the Soviet Union would provide Libya with $4.4 billion worth of military hardware, including thousands of tanks, rockets and other sophisticated weapons.

The only thing that Israel or her friends could take any comfort in is the fact that Libya's leader, Col. Khaddafi, is so volatile and such a nationalist that even the Soviet Union as a major arms supplier might not be able to remain on his good side for a long period of time.

What the agreement does, of course, is lend support to the declaration by 76 U.S. Senators last week that this nation should reaffirm its support for Israel and pledge not to lessen military and economic support for that beleaguered Middle East state.

We thought that criticism of that declaration was necessary because a reaffirmation of support for Israel was untimely due to the upcoming meeting between President Ford and President Sadat of Egypt. Many people agree that an evenhanded approach to the Middle East at this point would be a good idea.

And it would be expected that the Soviet Union — even if cynically motivated — would play the evenhanded game in the spirit of detente. After all, the Russians, while partially re-arming Syria, have not given Sadat what he wants in the way of military hardware.

But now along come the Soviets and arm the regional thug to the teeth.

That kind of action can only harden attitudes in the U.S.

ON TARGET

is also true that the senators persuaded the governor up in budget totals.

Not that Exon did not save sales and income taxpayers some money. He did.

School aid will be maintained at its current level. Building projects will be delayed or dropped. But operational funding for state programs finds the governor and the Legislature not that far apart.

You have to admire the senators for their independent strain.

The governor is an enormously popular man, a political marvel who speaks to and for the average guy. For the most part, they trust him. They listen to him. They believe him.

So when he tells Nebraskans that the Legislature has gone balmy, they are likely to believe it. Senators feel the pressure. But this group did not back down from its own convictions easily.

They finally yielded on school aid and budgeting, but not in panic. They won a few, and they lost a few. And perhaps that's how the executive-legislative competition is supposed to work.

Obviously, this Legislature was erratic. It changed its mind — sometimes within the space of a single day. It took all but one week of its session to enact a budget, and all but one of its 89 days of life to settle on a technical communications college plan.

It put much off until the very end, and some until 1976.

It probably made some mistakes.

But all of those "faults" are common to all of us. Which brings me to the central point.

It has been said before; it bears repeating: This Legislature is what it was intended to be, a representative body.

It has extremely bright and ambitious members. It has some members who are not particularly bright, ambitious or industrious. Some senators contribute much; some contribute nothing.

Just like the rest of us.

One thing the 1975 session did have was the gifted leadership of Jules Burbach. No one can efficiently manage a body of 49 equals, all with their own ideas and concerns. But Burbach guided them through the past five months with great skill, successfully securing action on every issue which could not wait.

This Legislature's 49 districts are not always represented by the best man (or woman) in the area. Maybe not even the best person available for the job. But I think, in most cases, each senator is fairly representative of his (or her) district, of the people in his (or her) district.

And that, I guess, is what it's all about.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The mini-war in Cambodia, with its sudden attacks in the dark and bizarre misunderstandings, illustrates the need for a more efficient worldwide communications system, and suggests a new and practical peace-keeping role for the United Nations.

problems at the height of the Greek-Turkish crisis over Cyprus, though not so serious, but the problem is the same: The military network of communications in the world is swift, and the diplomatic communications in many of the most inflammable areas of the world are slow.

Without taking over the past in Cambodia or Cyprus, the point here is fairly obvious: We need not only a hot-line between Washington and Moscow to avoid atomic wars but a worldwide fire-alarm or early-warning system that can com-without permission, and ordered the attack on Cambodia.

It is not clear, even now, whether the new Khmer Rouge regime ordered the seizure of the Mayaguez, during which President Ford landed the Marines in Thailand, without permission, and ordered the attack on Cambodia.

It is not clear, even now, whether the new Khmer Rouge regime ordered the seizure of the Mayaguez, or if it did, wanted to hand over the ship and its American crew before the Marines landed, but in any event, the orders from the Pentagon to attack moved much faster than the appeals from the State Department to Peking and Phnom Penh to make peace.

There were comparable municate the facts to every capital of every nation in the world.

The technology is available. In the last generation, the world has gone through the greatest communications revolution since the invention of the printing press and moveable type. There are now communications satellites in the heavens over every continent. Even the smallest capital of the newest nation in Africa, Asia or Latin America can hook into this fantastic system by telephone, teletype or even television, if it has a ground satellite station.

These earth stations are not prohibitively expensive. As modern technology improves, they are getting smaller and cheaper all the time. They are already portable, and can be folded up and transported in a Boeing 707.

Henry Kissinger took one along with him on his original mission to China. He could set one up in the desert in the Middle East, if his shuttle failed, and call securely through the scrambler system to the White House within an hours.

This is no secret super-power mystery. The International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (Intelsat) runs the communications satellites and sells its service. You have to put more than a dime in the slot, but if you have an earth satellite in Phnom Penh, and a mob at the door, you can call up Secretary General Waldheim here at the U.N., or even Henry Kissinger after midnight on Dumbarton Avenue in Georgetown, and discuss your problem.

This would be no assurance that inexperienced and turbulent revolutionary regimes like the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia would pick up the phone when the bell rings in the Intelsat system, but at least there would be a line of communication that might save lives and might even avoid wars.

The major powers have recognized the need for emergency "hot lines" to avoid misunderstanding and even atomic wars, but the outlook for the future is for conflict in places like Korea, Africa and the Middle East, in many parts of which there are no quick lines of communications.

Secretary General Waldheim here at the United Nations is eager to assist in the development of an early-warning system, but he has neither the power nor the money to set it up. He needs the support, or at least the understanding of the members of the world organization and particularly the acquiescence of the Major Powers.

All that is at issue here is merely that modern communications should be used to get the facts of potential wars to the world in time, and that is not asking very much.

NEW YORK — The bikini season is almost upon us. And as we face the first long, warm weekend of the year, the typical American female is discovering that age has lathered on its largess during the winter months while she was sitting around not looking.

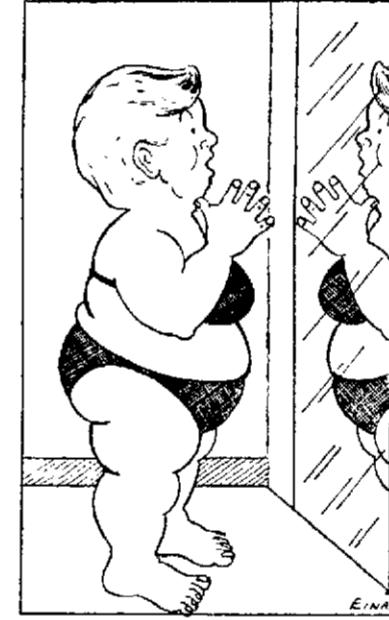

Nasty business, age. Weighty problem, thighs. Questionable invention, hips . . .

The women's magazines are laden with diets to get us into the spirit (and raiment) of summer, but medical authorities remind us that there really is no painless way to shed the drab flab of winter. We spend more than $100 million a year for weight-reducing pills and paraphernalia — and all we do is reduce our savings rather than our hips. Better we should save that $100 mill on food, because fasting is faster.

Even massage, one of the higher priced and highly enjoyable techniques for trimming down, has been repudiated by many authorities. A Dr. William Kalb proved this point by scientifically testing more than a dozen patients through "spot-reducing massage" sessions.

For six weeks, he ardently massaged one arm and one leg of each patient — leaving the other arms and legs untouched.

Without diet, their measurements showed no decrease.

When put on a diet, each patient showed an overall loss of inches; but the unmassaged limbs lost exactly the same inchage as the massaged ones. Which proves that the best things in life are now only expensive but ineffective.

In an American Medical Association publication, I read that it is not only economically unwise to spend money for diet pills, miracle diets, tonics and machines, but it is sometimes dangerous.

The AMA called reducing schemes "the most lucrative of medical frauds," and over-the-counter appetite-reducing pills "an amalgam of junk."

It is true that some reducing aids may bring about a temporary weight reduction, say doctors in the Consumer Union book, "The Medicine Show" — but probably this is in large part because "their use helps to put the overweight individual in the proper frame of mind to cut down on intake of food." But it doesn't last.

Nor do fad diets last. Over the generations, there have been endless varieties of "new and revolutionary" diets (they pop up as regularly as flowers in the spring) — the milk diet, the banana diet, the high-fat diet, the low-fat diet, the Rockefeller Diet, the Stillman, Atkins and everybody-else diets. All of them have thousands of enthusiastic followers. And all of them pass into history, once their followers watch their weight fade temporarily, and then come back relentlessly.

Exercise is helpful for losing inches, but the distressing fact is that a vigorous squash racquet game with active play lasting 30 minutes can result in an expenditure of 300 calories — the same net calorie loss that is accomplished merely by saying, "no, thanks" to a slice of lemon meringue pie.

As "The Medicine Show" states clearly: "the best results for the least cost to health and pocketbook can be obtained by long-term calorie restriction, regular and well-balanced meals, and moderate exercise."

That sounds like the hard way. But it's the only way, for now. In the future, medical science may find a genuine "cure" for overweight. One of the chief researchers into that cure, Dr. Jules Hirsch of N.Y.C.'s Rockefeller University Hospital, has discovered through extensive research that fat patients have not only extra-large fat cells in the body, but also an increased number of fat cells: As patients lose weight on a medically supervised diet, the size of each fat cell decreases — but the number of cells remains the same.

When he and other researchers find out why this should be, Dr. Hirsch has said, "we'll knock obesity off the charts as America's Number One health problem."

Meantime, save on calories and costs by avoiding the fads and pills. And remember that, fortunately, beauty is only skin deep — and bikinis are for show-offs!

WASHINGTON — President Ford is scheduled to attend a NATO summit conference in Brussels May 29-30 and then fly on to Salzburg, Madrid and Rome before returning to Washington.

Summit meetings usually are ceremonial affairs where heads of government sign agreements reached earlier at a lower diplomatic level. The forthcoming NATO summit in Brussels promises to be different. For one thing, less than a full complement of government leaders will be on hand. And they are expected to agree on little more than a declaration of faith in the 26-year-old military alliance.

NATO has been in disarray for several years, but events of the last 10 months have subjected it to almost intolerable strain. Greece, angered by the Turkish invasion of Cyprus, withdrew from the NATO Defense Planning Committee last September. Various Turkish officials subsequently indicated that their country also was reassessing its ties to the alliance.

France, meanwhile, continues to play the role of maverick. It will be represented at the summit by Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues instead of by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing or Premier Jacques Chirac.

Furthermore, Portugal's commitment to NATO is now in question as a result of last year's coup by leftist military officers. NATO officials are concerned about mounting communist influence in Portugal despite the party's disappointing showing in recent elections for a constituent assembly.

Italy is still another potential trouble spot on NATO's southern flank. If a Communist-Christian Democratic coalition government should come to power, as some observers fear, Italy might drift away from NATO and into neutrality.

President Ford no doubt will try to reassure America's NATO partners when he attends the Brussels summit. It will be no easy task. European NATO members are still disturbed by the United States' failure to consult with them during the Middle East war of October, 1973, and by the bitter recriminations that followed. And they are uncomfortably aware of the growing sentiment in Congress favoring U.S. troop reductions in Europe. All in all, Gerald Ford's first trip to Europe as president looks like anything but a pleasant one.

By DON WALTON

It was a Legislature which did not conform to expectations.

Billed in advance as a do-nothing Legislature, it turned out to be stubbornly productive.

Not particularly efficient or proficient. Certainly not as daring or progressive as the sessions which wrought great change in the second half of the 1960's.

But it was certainly better than anyone had a right to expect, coming to life only weeks after Nebraska voters had restated their conservative convictions and also wiped out the 1974 Legislature's landmark school aid enactment.

This Unicameral was supposed to have read those election results carefully and cowered in the corner.

But it went ahead and enacted another school aid plan, backing down only at the last moment and accepting Governor Exon's veto.

Once you add up the record of this 89-day session, you will not find a list of historic achievements. Some of its major enactments were, in fact, a step backward for plain citizens and consumers.

But it did finally muster its courage and fund a prison construction bill. Let's face it. That is not a spending proposal which is in popular demand. It could be easily ignored, put off for another year.

Yet, this do-nothing Legislature approved it, even though it had to enact it over a veto.

Not the sort of thing wholly timid people do.

And it hammered together what appeared to be a fairly decent state budget, trimmed here and there with a few unneeded items, but a generally conservative budget.

Its spending policies (school aid is not really one of them, although it keeps getting counted as spending, rather than tax replacement) triggered a running battle with Exon, filled with explosive language and verbal fireworks.

For awhile, this Legislature held its ground.

Then, at the last minute, face to face with the governor, it blinked. His budget vetoes prevailed — but the spending cuts were not as large as they looked.

Not counting capital construction projects and the proposed hike in school aid, the 1975-76 operational budget finally accepted by Exon was not that much different from the one enacted by the lawmakers.

The difference is on the order of one percent.

While Exon forced the Legislature down, it and that, I guess, is what it's all about.

This is no secret super-power mystery. The International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (Intelsat) runs the communications satellites and sells its service. You have to put more than a dime in the slot, but if you have an earth satellite in Phnom Penh, and a mob at the door, you can call up Secretary General Waldheim here at the U.N., or even Henry Kissinger after midnight on Dumbarton Avenue in Georgetown, and discuss your problem.

With this kind of open communications technology available to every nation in the world, it is odd and even ridiculous that wars have to start or go on for lack of facts. We have communications but we don't communicate. "Natural folly is bad enough," Thomas Fuller observed back in 1732, "but learned folly is intolerable."

May be, then, there is a practical role that can be played by the United Nations, as communicator or postmaster, if not as peacemaker. At San Francisco a generation ago, the U.N. was conceived as a world organization with its own military organization that could impose peace on the world, but that dream has long since vanished.

Then it was seen as a research organization, gathering the facts of impending disasters in a hungry world, and as a debating society for conflicting views on the coming age, and occasionally as a weak but symbolic police force between contending armies in Cyprus and the Middle East.

But even in these limited roles, it has been hobbled by the most inadequate communications, and has been reduced to begging Intelsat for free access to the world satellite system, which Intelsat refused.

The experience of the Cambodian incident and the Cyprus war between Greece and Turkey, however, suggests at least a modest remedy. Namely, that an earth communications satellite should be available to every nation in the world, financed through the United Nations budget, so that potential military crises can be reported and dealt with in time.

This would be no assurance that inexperienced and turbulent revolutionary regimes like the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia would pick up the phone when the bell rings in the Intelsat system, but at least there would be a line of communication that might save lives and might even avoid wars.

The major powers have recognized the need for emergency "hot lines" to avoid misunderstanding and even atomic wars, but the outlook for the future is for conflict in places like Korea, Africa and the Middle East, in many parts of which there are no quick lines of communications.

Secretary General Waldheim here at the United Nations is eager to assist in the development of an early-warning system, but he has neither the power nor the money to set it up. He needs the support, or at least the understanding of the members of the world organization and particularly the acquiescence of the Major Powers.

All that is at issue here is merely that modern communications should be used to get the facts of potential wars to the world in time, and that is not asking very much.

NEW YORK — The bikini season is almost upon us. And as we face the first long, warm weekend of the year, the typical American female is discovering that age has lathered on its largess during the winter months while she was sitting around not looking.

Nasty business, age. Weighty problem, thighs. Questionable invention, hips . . .

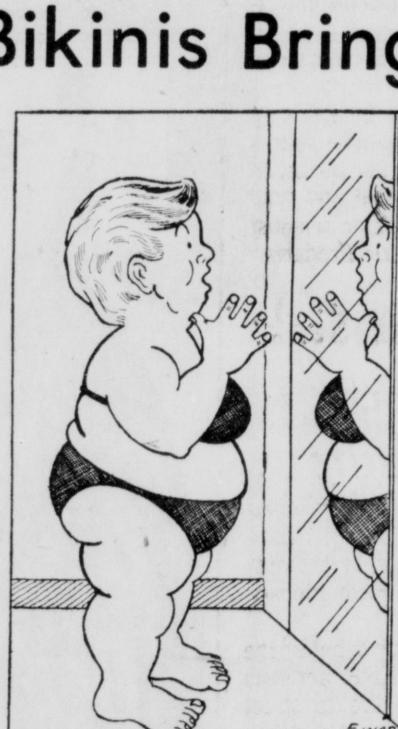

The women's magazines are laden with diets to get us into the spirit (and raiment) of summer, but medical authorities remind us that there really is no painless way to shed the drab flab of winter. We spend more than $100 million a year for weight-reducing pills and paraphernalia — and all we do is reduce our savings rather than our hiplines. Better we should save that $100 mill on food, because fasting is faster.

Even massage, one of the higher priced and highly enjoyable techniques for trimming down, has been repudiated by many authorities. A Dr. William Kalb proved this point by scientifically testing more than a dozen patients through "spot-reducing massage" sessions.

For six weeks, he ardently massaged one arm and one leg of each patient — leaving the other arms and legs untouched.

Without diet, their measurements showed no decrease.

When put on a diet, each patient showed an overall loss of inches; but the unmassaged limbs lost exactly the same in change as the massaged ones. Which proves that the best things in life are now only expensive but ineffective.

In an American Medical Association publication, I read that it is not only economically unwise to spend money for diet pills, miracle diets, tonics and machines, but it is sometimes dangerous.

Bikinis Bring Out The Drab Flab

The AMA called reducing schemes "the most lucrative of medical frauds," and over-the-counter appetite-reducing pills "an amalgam of junk."

It is true that some reducing aids may bring about a temporary weight reduction, say doctors in the Consumer Union book, "The Medicine Show" — but probably this is in large part because "their use helps to put the overweight individual in the proper frame of mind to cut down on intake of food." But it doesn't last.

Nor do fat diets last. Over the generations, there have been endless varieties of "new and revolutionary" diets (they pop up as regularly as flowers in the spring) — the milk diet, the banana diet, the high-fat diet, the low-fat diet, the Rockefeller Diet, the Stillman, Atkins and everybody-else diets. All of them have thousands of enthusiastic followers. And all of them pass into history, once their followers watch their weight fade temporarily, and then come back relentlessly.

Exercise is helpful for losing inches, but the distressing fact is that a vigorous squash racquets game with active play lasting 30 minutes can result in an expenditure of 300 calories — the same net calorie loss that is accomplished merely by saying, "no, thanks" to a slice of lemon meringue pie.

WASHINGTON — President Ford is scheduled to attend a NATO summit conference in Brussels May 29-30 and then fly on to Salzburg, Madrid and Rome before returning to Washington.

Summit meetings usually are ceremonial affairs where heads of government sign agreements reached earlier at a lower diplomatic level. The forthcoming NATO summit in Brussels promises to be different. For one thing, less than a full complement of government leaders will be on hand. And they are expected to agree on little more than a declaration of faith in the 26-year-old military alliance.

NATO has been in disarray for several years, but events of the last 10 months have subjected it to almost intolerable strain. Greece, angered by the Turkish invasion of Cyprus, withdrew from the NATO Defense Planning Committee last September. Various Turkish officials subsequently indicated that their country also was reassessing its ties to the alliance.

France, meanwhile, continues to play the role of maverick. It will be represented at the summit by Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues instead of by President Valery Giscard d'E斯塔ing or Premier Jacques Chirac.

Furthermore, Portugal's commitment to NATO is now in question as a result of last year's coup by leftist military officers. NATO officials are concerned about mounting communist influence in Portugal despite the party's disappointing showing in recent elections for a constituent assembly.

Italy is still another potential trouble spot on NATO's southern flank. If a Communist-Christian Democratic coalition government should come to power, as some observers fear, Italy might drift away from NATO and into neutrality.

President Ford no doubt will try to reassure America's NATO partners when he attends the Brussels summit. It will be no easy task. European NATO members are still disturbed by the United States' failure to consult with them during the Middle East war of October, 1973, and by the bitter reprimands that followed. And they are uncomfortably aware of the growing sentiment in Congress favoring U.S. troop reductions in Europe. All in all, Gerald Ford's first trip to Europe as president looks like anything but a pleasant one.

Seminex President Says 'Healing' Up To Members

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

Hope for healing the wounds within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod lies with rank-and-file church members, not with the national leaders, the president of Concordia Seminary in Exile (Seminex) said Sunday.

The Rev. Dr. John H. Tietjen said in an interview that reconciliation between the church's liberal and conservative factions is "not likely in the near future" because "the church's leaders today consider reconciliation to be equal with capitulation."

The synod's problems will be resolved "only if the rank-and-file church members decide that the church is big enough to accommodate all of our beliefs," he said.

"I don't expect a great deal of progress at the next convention (in Anaheim, Calif., July 4-11), but it won't be a great disaster either. The crucial decisions are to be made in the congregations after the convention."

Tietjen spoke to about 130 people Sunday afternoon in the Gateway Auditorium at the Gateway Shopping Center. He is the central figure in a doctrinal dispute that surfaced within the Missouri Synod in 1974.

Accident Makes Cyclist Believer In Helmets

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha policeman is a strong believer in helmets for motorcyclists, but it took an accident, a serious one, to teach him.

Terry Burgraff had seen many motorcyclists who were hurled off their bikes during a collision. Some of the more gruesome accidents prompted him to put away his bike for a time.

But May 8 his cycle was involved in a crash that left him near death for several days. He was finally at home Sunday, but it may be six months to a year before he returns to duty.

"That's it," he said. "That's the end of my bike. I'm going to

YRs Take Exon To Task For 'Doing A Flip-Flop'

Kearney (AP) — Nebraska Young Republicans formally criticized Democratic Gov. J. James Exon for "doing a flip-flop" and blaming the State Legislature for higher spending.

A resolution adopted at the annual meeting said the governor has repeatedly called for higher taxes during his tenure and has repeatedly introduced record-breaking budgets.

Another resolution asked the legislature to rescind a law requiring that Omaha Board of Education members be elected by district rather than at large.

The resolution noted that the issue had been turned down in elections by voters in Omaha,

Space Docking Is Carried Out By Cosmonauts

Moscow (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts docked their Soyuz 18 spacecraft with the orbiting Salyut 4 space station Sunday and went aboard, Moscow radio reported.

It said that they found all systems in the spacelab working normally.

Salyut 4 has been drifting through space under automatic guidance since Feb. 9 when two other cosmonauts left it after spending 30 days aboard in a Soviet space endurance record.

The radio did not say how long the present mission will last.

It said Cosmonauts Lt. Col. Pyotr Klimuk, 33, the craft's commander, and Vitaly Sevastyanov, 40, were feeling well.

Education Board Okays 2 Grants

The State Board of Education has approved grants for a writing laboratory in the Lincoln Public Schools and a bicentennial project for Educational Service Unit No. 18, located in Lincoln.

A grant of $57,370 will be used to develop a system for diagnosing student writing problems and testing it in two schools.

A $41,597 bicentennial project grant will help develop a statewide curriculum concerning the contributions of Nebraskans to American life.

Presley Tour In July

New York (UPI) — Promoters for Elvis Presley's national tour which begins in July, report an advance of more than $1 million is expected before the first concert at the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island. Tickets will sell for $10 top.

Tietjen was suspended as president of Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, Mo., on Jan. 21, 1974, for subscribing to allegedly false doctrine and administrative malfeasance. A central part of the controversy was the Missouri Synod's insistence that the first three chapters of Genesis be literally rather than symbolically.

Following Tietjen's suspension, a seminary in exile (Seminex) was set up in St. Louis by some 50 Concordia faculty members who suspended themselves in support of Tietjen. More than 400 students, many of them dissident Concordia students, began attending classes there.

Seminex is still operating in "good shape" today, Tietjen said. He called the insistence on literal interpretation of the Bible "a Roman Catholic, 16th Century position."

"Martin Luther would have some very blunt things to say about that," he said. "People have to have the right to study the Scriptures for themselves."

The "Bible believers-Bible doubters" issue is really a "smoke screen," Tietjen said, that has allowed "certain people within the church to gain control through a political process."

The Missouri Synod "at the national level is being run by a political party, and it is running the church by a political model," he said.

According to Tietjen, the split in the church is now reaching the local level where some congregations are in trouble for accepting Seminex graduates as pastors and some pastors have been removed for membership in the Evangelical Lutherans in Mission (ELIM).

ELIM is a moderate group claiming support from more than 100,000 church members. The organization has raised more than $2 million in the last 18 months in support of Seminex and an alternative mission group.

In a question-answer session after his speech, Tietjen was asked by the audience about his actions prior to his suspension and about his beliefs.

During the speech, Tietjen said he "accepts without reservation the authority of the Holy Scriptures" and said that "whatever the problems may be in the Missouri Synod, they are not the kind of problems that should divide the church."

NU Scientist To Research Gas Lasers

Lincoln, Neb. (UPI) — A University of Nebraska physicist has received a $30,000 grant to enable him to contribute to the laser fusion research program.

The university said the program is considered nationally as the best long-range hope for the present energy crisis.

Prof. David Golden, who will be doing the research, received the grant from the Air Force Office of scientific research. It is the first grant in a five-year program.

Golden will be study high-powered gas lasers from the point of view of basic physics. Specifically, Golden will study "electron excitation of laser media," according to the university.

Golden has been a member of the NU physics department faculty since 1970. Before coming to Nebraska, Golden was a staff scientist for the Lockheed Aircraft research lab and from 1969-70 he was senior scientist for Sylvania Electric Products.

Authorities Seek Leftist Escapees

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — Police Sunday sought to recapture 28 women, most of them leftist guerrillas, who escaped from a Cordoba jail amid diversionary tactics by the outlawed People's Revolutionary Army (ERP).

Police said that just before the escape effort, ERP activists erected and set fire to street barricades near the old prison and made telephone calls falsely reporting accidents.

that the people of Omaha "are capable of deciding local issues themselves," and that Omaha has a home rule charter.

The resolution also said Young Republicans believe in local government.

The YR elected as members of its executive committee, by districts, Greg O'Flynn of Lincoln, Jerry Florine of Omaha, and Harold Whipple of Ainsworth. Kois Baker of Lincoln was named teen-age member.

Others named were Dan Urwiler of Kearney, resolutions chairman; Rod Palmer of Ainsworth, legal counsel; Jim Farmer of North Platte, membership chairman; and Pat Tripp of Blair, communications director.

James Anderson

Elks Elect Anderson

Kearney — A Kearney man, James Anderson, was elected president of the Nebraska State Elks Association for 1975-76 at the Elks 63rd annual convention held here.

Other officers include Ken Muirhead, Cozad, first vice president; Dale Janowski, Omaha, second vice president; J. B. Ferguson, Ord, third vice president; Chester O. Marshall, Kearney, secretary, and Elmer Bradley, Columbus, treasurer.

Some 400 delegates heard reports of statewide gifts to crippled children of more than $30,000 and more than $25,000 to other youth activities. National Foundation Scholarship Leadership and Most Valuable Student awards totaled more than $15,000.

The top Elks ritual team was Ogallala, and it will represent Nebraska in the national contest in Dallas in July. Other places went to Scottsbluff, second; Kearney, third, and Lincoln, fourth.

The board will report Tuesday the fiscal impact of population shifts and expanded programs as they relate to teacher-pupil ratios in the Lincoln Public Schools.

At the 8 a.m. Lincoln Board of Education meeting, Prasch will also offer recommendations for age limitations and review the contracting policy for special education programs.

The items relate directly to budget planning, which board members will begin next month, leading to adoption in July of a budget estimated at $33 million for 1975-76.

Board President Lou Roper last week requested information, based on campaign proposals by new board member Lu Pansing, on reducing the goal of 28 students per teacher to result in a more favorable ratio for children in kindergarten through third or fourth grade.

Special education programs for the handicapped no longer allow state reimbursement for children above age 19, and the board must decide on completion criteria for those in special programs. That could include the district paying the extra cost to continue the most expensive programs for the handicapped through age 21.

The board will also review the results of the Beckmann-Beal mathematical competencies test, which 2,120 ninth-graders took in April. The data will be used to strengthen the public schools' math competency program.

The board ordered an evaluation of students' mastery of basic skills, after complaints about the "Continuous Progress Laboratories (CPL)" math program.

Procedures on kindergarten registration will be reviewed by Supervisors Rudolph L. Fredstrom, student services, and Helen Weber, health services.

Roper has called for an investigation of the validity of pre-kindergarten tests used for academic groupings.

Co-directors Judy Roderick and Alden Johnson will report on the "Educational Participation in the Community" (EPIC) program, begun last November.

Carroll R. Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel, will recommend the board approve new appointments, and notably more shifts among school principals and administrators.

The board will also be asked to award $10,955 in bids to three contractors for concrete and asphalt work at Beattie and Clinton Elementary Schools, Dawes and Everett Junior Highs, and at Lincoln Southeast High School.

Couple Shares Countdown To A Miracle

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles for which Star Staff Writer Gracia McAndrew accompanied a local young couple to prenatal instruction and into labor and delivery rooms to report the story of the birth of their daughter.)

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Visiting hours have long been over. The man lobby at St. Elizabeth's Community Health Center was quiet and empty. Even the gift shop was locked and dark.

Yet, only a short distance from the main lobby, things were happening in labor room No. 802. It was 1:30 a.m. The final countdown had begun.

Having arrived at the hospital shortly after 1 a.m., expectant parents, John and Mary Bills, were talking and laughing in the labor room. Their conversation was interrupted every four to five minutes by a labor contraction.

Anxious, yet calm, the couple discussed the odds of having a son.

"It's one twin," joked the obstetrics nurse, as she listened to the fetal heartbeat. "There's a 50-50 chance for a boy."

"There's ALWAYS a 50-50 chance for a boy!" the waiting father retorted.

"Just so it's healthy," Mary said, looking toward her husband, who quietly agreed.

Making a note of the time on the wall clock, John moved closer to the bed. Another contraction had begun.

In studied concentration, Mary heard only his voice, saw only one focal point on the black wall in front of her.

"15 seconds, 30 seconds, 60 seconds . . ." he counted, timing the contraction.

As the contraction's intensity increased, Mary accelerated her breathing to work with the contraction, not against it; to "keep above" any discomfort.

In less than two minutes, her breathing returned to normal. The contraction had subsided.

The conversation resumed, less animated now, because the time of birth was a few minutes and one contraction closer.

Mary rolled onto her side, allowing John to massage her tense back. He continued the comforting massage until asked to leave when the doctor arrived to examine his patient.

Still dressed in street clothes, Dr. Nathan Simon would be garbed in a standard green surgical gown the next time John saw him.

"She's at seven centimeters," said Mrs. Phyllis Kenney RN, emerging from the labor room. "We broke her bag of water, so we better get you changed."

With the cervix (the uterus opening) at seven centimeters, it would only be a matter of minutes before it was fully dilated to 10 centimeters — about the size of a man's palm, including thumb — and large enough for the baby to squeeze through.

While Mary was being prepared for delivery, John donned the sterile delivery room apparel — pants, shirt, cap, mask and paper shoe covers.

He would be present in the delivery room to support and aid Mary throughout the birth.

Hailed by Mrs. Kenney, John entered the delivery room. Although typically sterile-looking, it was amazingly void of complex equipment.

"What time will the baby be born?" he promptly asked Dr. Simon, challenging him to make a guess.

"Three forty two," Simon responded off the top of his head.

But there were only a few minutes for light conversation. The real work had begun.

"At the next contraction, really bear down,

She relaxed, uncurled her head and neck, lay back and asked for a wet cloth to wipe her red and perspiring face.

"Real good, Mary, real good," Dr. Simon praised. "Now, here's the episiotomy."

After administering a local anesthetic, Dr. Simon cut a small incision (episiotomy) in the perineum — the small area of skin between the vagina and rectum — to make a larger opening for the soon-to-be-born infant.

Averting her attention from the important activity at hand, Mary turned to John and asked, "Is our tape recorder on?" It was; ready to capture and preserve the moment of birth.

The baby had crowned now — the top of its head was showing through the dilated cervix. Another contraction, one of the final ones, commenced.

A cleansing breath, a deep breath. Hold it! Mary tucked her head and neck, gripped the delivery table handles and pushed.

"One, two, three . . ." the cadence began. Mary's air-filled lungs pushed her diaphragm down applying pressure to the uterus.

PUSH! PUSH! PUSH!

"Four, five, six . . ." John coached.

"Don't push anymore!" Dr. Simon commanded.

Still feeling the urge to push, Mary resorted to short, rapid blowing, a technique used to pull the diaphragm up and off the uterus.

Dr. Simon gently worked the head out of the birth canal.

"Okay Mary, let's have a big push for the shoulders," Simon said.

Supported by John, Mary curled again and pushed. The shoulders were free, then the torso, then the legs.

The time was 3:48 a.m.

"Another girl. A big girl," Simon told the anxious parents, lifting the child high so they could get their first look.

The mucus was extracted from her nose, throat and mouth. The infant let out a healthy wail.

"How do you feel?" John asked Mary.

"Worn out," she sighed.

After severing the umbilical cord, Dr. Simon placed the newborn on the mother's stomach.

"It's Emily," Mother Bills said. "It's Emily Cjersten. She has a cleft chin."

Emily — all nine pounds, two and one-half ounces of her — was then placed in an infant warmer, so Mary could finish her work.

One more push to expel the placenta and she could rest for awhile.

Her work completed, Mary lay back again. Soon she would be holding her daughter in her arms.

"All we have to do is knit one, purl two and we'll be done," Simon said as he mended the incision he had made.

John wandered over to the cradle to marvel over his new and second daughter — one he thought surely would be a son.

"You really surprised me, squirt," he said.

Twins Want To Double Up In College

DEAR ABBY: My brother and I are 17-year-old identical twins. Our parents have been separated since we were 10, and we haven't seen our father since then.

My twin brother and I are very close. (We have no other brothers or sisters.) Some people think that we feel "incomplete" when we're apart, but the truth is that we are always together because we really want to be. We have most of the same friends, double date a lot and stick together out of choice, not out of need.

Next year we will be going off to college. We want to go to the same college but our mother says that we should go to different colleges so that we can learn to be independent. Our guidance counselor says it's time we made a break from each other.

Abby, we don't really want to make a break. Are they right? Or are we?

A TWIN

DEAR TWIN: If you and your brother are not using your twinhood to get attention, if you are equally endowed, if you really enjoy each other as friends, if you can each cultivate friends individually, I would advise you to go to the same college — if you want to. A twin is more than just a womb mate. A twin is a friend.

And a closer friendship never was. I ought to know.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14-years-old, and I have a problem. My family moved into a new house, and my father made some rules.

One was "no eating" except in the kitchen. However, my father eats wherever he wants to. He dropped greasy foods on the floor in the living room, which left a grease spot on the new carpet. My mother doesn't eat much, but she smokes a lot, and she already dropped ashes on the carpet and burned a hole in it.

My little sister and I are watched like hawks, but we don't eat in the living room and we are neater than they are.

What do you think? Don't you think my parents should practice what they preach?

HUNGRY IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR HUNGRY: They should. But there is no way of forcing them to. They belong to that big club whose motto is: "Don't do as I do — do as I say."

Unfortunately, rank has its privileges, and parents outrank their kids.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law died recently. She had one daughter and three sons — all of whom are married.

All of her good stuff she left to her daughter. Everything else (the junk) she left to her daughters-in-law.

I fell heir to a well-worn beaver coat. It's at least 20 years old and looks it. I know that I will never wear it, so I'd like to donate it to our church auxiliary resale shop.

My husband says he doesn't care what I do with it, but it has his mother's name embroidered on the lining, and he's afraid people will think I'm disrespectful if I donate it to the resale shop.

What would you do?

GOOD FOR NOTHING

DEAR GOOD: I'd remove the name and donate it.

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with "Red-Faced," who wrote to say that she was embarrassed to watch some of those TV commercials with her boyfriend.

I've been in sales and advertising for over 50 years, and I recently became uneasy watching certain TV commercials with my daughter and son-in-law. I think the media is going out of bounds with some of the products they advertise.

If the "red-faced" young lady will go the public library and ask for an up-to-date copy of "Advertisers" all major companies listed with the brand names they produce and the names of their executive personnel.

She should then write a letter to the president of the company telling him why she thinks his advertising is offensive. It will be far more effective than writing to the F.C.C., as you recommended.

I've done this with several products and was amazed at the personal attention I received.

T.W.T.: TEXAN

DEAR T.W.T.: Thanks for the suggestion. Others have written to tell me that writing to the F.C.C. to complain about offensive TV commercials was a waste of time.

For Ruhnke, Happiness Is Assuming Responsibilities

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Happiness is . . . For Arnold Ruhnke happiness is assuming the responsibility which goes with being a Nebraskan.

Be it by preservation of the state's natural beauty through the handcrafting of wood and rocks, or through the formulation of laws under which the state is governed, Ruhnke believes in doing his part.

A farmer, active participant in farm organizations, state senator and lobbyist, Ruhnke believes in taking pride in being a Nebraskan and doing something about it.

Ruhnke served in the Legislature for 14 years, representing basically the rural interests, and in 1968 became the executive director of the Nebraska Association of County Officials.

In addition to that capacity, Ruhnke spends his spare hours cutting and polishing stones and doing woodworking — all with Nebraska rocks and natural woods, which he gathers himself.

"I guess you take some sort of personal pride in doing things which are lasting," Ruhnke said in reference to legislation as well as to handcrafting. He hopes the latter will be handed down through his family.

Woodworking is a hobby of many, but not many start with the raw wood as Ruhnke does.

Using only woods native to Nebraska, Ruhnke scours the areas along creeks in his home Jefferson County for broken and dead trees and takes the potential woods which commercial companies won't buy.

"I don't believe in cutting down good, healthy trees," he said, noting that the black walnut of which he is particularly fond is not plentiful.

Unless the trees are at least 14 inches in diameter, the commercial companies leave them, he said, adding that he utilizes many of the smaller trees and then laminates the wood in furniture making.

It all started with the framing of pictures, Ruhnke recalls.

"I had purchased for a small price some prints on canvas in conjunction with a savings company promotion, and went to have them framed commercially," he said.

Ruhnke said when he found out how much commercial framing costs, "I thought surely I could do it myself."

"So I gathered the wood, took it to a sawmill and had it cut and then planed and put it by a heating unit at home to draw out the moisture," he said.

After successfully framing several pictures, Ruhnke decided to try his talents on a larger scale.

When he assumed the responsibilities as executive director of the Nebraska Association of County Officials, Ruhnke began making office accessories, including frames for pictures, a waste basket, bookends, letter tray and a table.

He later undertook larger projects, including a clock of native Nebraska walnut, some desks, a bed and more recently a dresser.

These pieces of furniture he hopes will be handed down to his three children and then his 10 grandchildren, Ruhnke said.

"My father came here from Germany," he recalls, adding that he was brought up to appreciate the opportunities here.

Although his father was not a supporter of politics, Ruhnke says that his father's appreciation for the opportunities available in a democratic society stirred his interest in working to build and preserve a better Nebraska.

During Ruhnke's tenure as a state senator, Lincoln Star Staffer Don Walton wrote in his "On Target" column that Ruhnke's voice "was always heard on the big ones. His constituents are always well-represented."

". . . almost alone, Ruhnke has actively attempted to represent the general public, the people, the consumer in the consideration of complicated, eleventh hour legislation . . ." Walton stated.

Ruhnke was also cited as an outstanding senator by his colleagues in 1964.

Serving as a state senator was a "tremendously satisfying experience," Ruhnke recalls, but contends he also enjoys the legislative process from the other side.

Having spent 14 years as a state senator and eight years in his present position, Ruhnke says, "some issues make you want to get back in there."

The 22-year veteran of the legislative process feels that bringing the issues to the county officials and then encouraging them to contact their respective senators is the most effective means of doing the job.

"I try to make good presentations and get the best information to the senators at public hearings on bills affecting counties," he said.

He said he attempts to keep the officials informed of the progress of bills and the attitudes of the senators on the proposed legislation.

"I pay more attention to constituents," which is not very different from serving in the Legislature, he said, noting that he placed prime emphasis on constituents when a senator.

Graduates Of School Of Design Can Sleep On Diplomas (Really!)

Providence, R.I. (UPI) — The 450 graduates of the Rhode Island School of Design can sleep with their 1975 diplomas or even use them as briefcases.

They are stuffed pillows created by senior Ken Cooper, the latest in a line of unusual diplomas given School of Design graduates in addition to the paper diplomas handed out at commencement.

His creation was chosen last fall in a competition where the runnerup was a diploma printed on a T-shirt.

"RISD has been doing various diplomas for every year. I wanted to do a three-dimensional one as an art piece for each person," Cooper said Thursday as he began work on the last batch.

"Since I'm in textiles, I naturally thought in that direction. I decided a stuffed, quilted diploma would be very interesting," he said.

Last year, the graduates got large, appropriately inscribed cookie diplomas baked in school ovens. The ovens, used to cure ceramics, had some poisons in them — so eating the diplomas was discouraged.

Previous diplomas included one with a nude painted on it, one inscribed with pictures of a diploma written in the sky and another framed in neon lights.

Cooper, 22, of Trumbull, Conn. has worked on the project for several months with a budget of $1,000 to buy 190 yards of stuffing, 250 yards of heavy muslin and the 450 school of design ribbons and seal pins to be attached to each pillow.

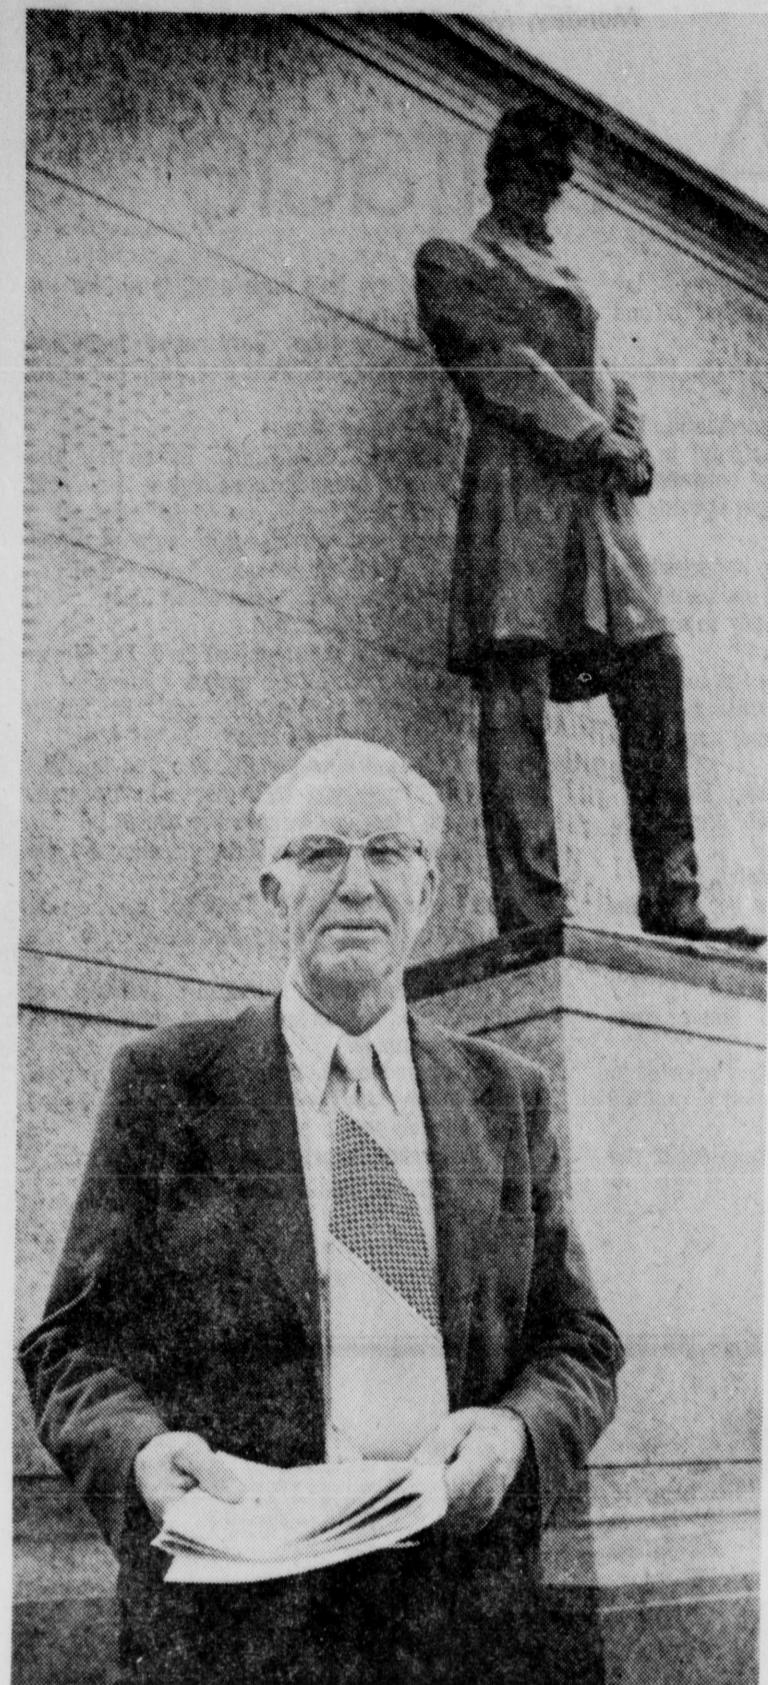

He gets three credits for the work which includes silkscreening each diploma and having the individual student's name printed on them.

"I made this diploma so the paper one would fit inside it if they choose to. My pet idea is to use it as a briefcase and carry your papers from job to job," Cooper said.

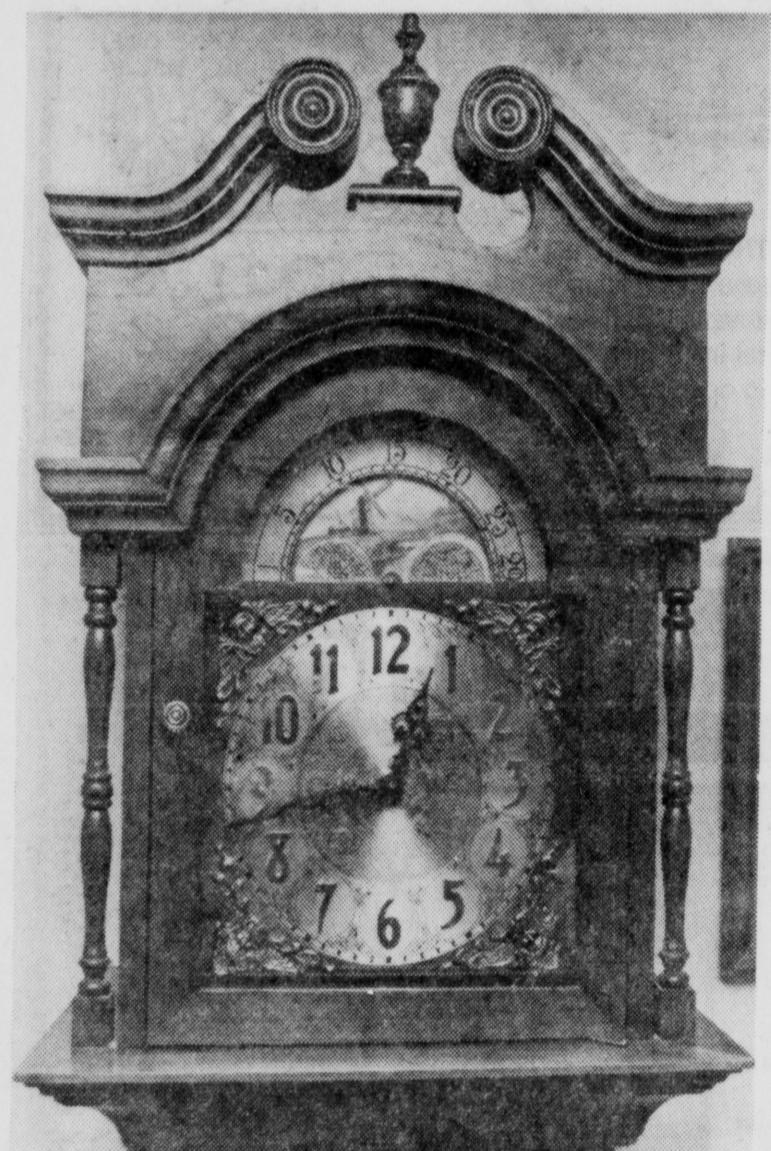

Most seniors like his creations, "but it was very hard in an art school to choose colors. You can never please everyone," he said.

So the pillow-diplomas come in a 30 different colors.

Poll: Legalized Early Abortions Backed

By LOUIS HARRIS

A 54-38% majority of Americans favors legalized abortion for women who are not more than three months pregnant.

These latest results represent the greatest public support for abortion ever recorded by the Harris Survey and a marked change of public opinion since 1972, when 46-42% opposed abortion up to three months of pregnancy legal?"

made it illegal for a woman to have an abortion up to three months of pregnancy were unconstitutional and that the decision on whether a woman should have an abortion up to three months of pregnancy should be left to the woman and her doctor to decide. In general, do you favor or oppose the U.S. Supreme Court decision making abortions up to three months of pregnancy legal?"

There is no doubt that the U.S. Supreme Court decision solidified public support for legalizing abortions.

Yet this support varies widely among key segments in the population, as the following breakdown shows:

Backing for legalized abortions is predominately provided by easterners and westerners, people under 30, Protestants and Jews and those with some college education, while the main opposition comes from southerners, those 50 and older and people whose education did not go beyond grade school. Oddly enough, more men than women favor abortions, and a

Ask the Old Farmer: Why is the word blue in the old saying "once in a blue moon"? H. D., Beaver Falls, Pa.

There are two schools of thought. One states that under certain conditions the moon can and does appear to be blue in color. Our notion is that this could be caused by a mild eclipse, but maybe not. The other argues that the moon normally resembles a good-natured face, almost smiling. But, from some cause or other, this appearance can change until the face looks sad, or "blue."

Our Man in the Mediterranean — living it up on spiced lamb and stuffed grape leaves — is cruising in the wake of Ulysses, the gregarious Greek. This is his second dispatch.

The new Golden Odyssey turned to the rising sun today to find the Spanish island of Mallorca. Is this Homer's Ogygia? Island home of Calypso — the navel of the sea, in the remote West?

Ulysses that hard luck Greek sailor, spent 20 years getting home to Ithaca. Nine of those years were on Ogygia with the nymph Calypso. (How did he explain that at home?)

Palma the main town is international — in the summer season the airport lands and sends off more airplanes than any place in the world. Cheap air fares keeps Mallorca booming. And in the sun-warmed sidewalk cafes you hear English and Dutch, all the Scandinavian languages and a sprinkle of Japanese.

San Miguel is the beer. Made in Spain under license from the parent company in the Philippines. They bring it to you ice cold. You can sit and watch the world go by while salt sea air steals up the ancient streets.

Twenty years ago, Mallorca fathers gave their precious farming land to favorite sons. The younger kids inherited the useless beaches.

So today the meek have inherited the sand every beach topped by million dollar hotels. A moral for all of us, but I'm not sure just what.

The Golden Odyssey dropped 460 passengers and 200 crewmen on Palma. Filled the pedestrian shopping streets and the stores that sell laces wrought iron, bric-a-brac and glassware.

Big bus in Palma are the famous Mallorca pearls. (However they're priced better in Madrid.)

This is the first cruise of the Golden Odyssey. Passengers are flown from the States to Lisbon by World Airways charter. Spend fourteen days cruising fly home from Dubrovnik. Total price $1,295.

It's a Greek ship. The menu is big on dolmas and moussaka and Greek lamb. One jumbo plane load fills the ship. There are 237 staterooms on nine decks. Owner is Royal Cruise Line in San Francisco.

There's a Ulysses Lounge, The Sirens Boutique, The Lotus Restaurant, And The Wooden Horse Bar — what else?

Scandinavia with the long dark winter could pretty well fill Mallorca alone. Their cheap packaged trips — air fare plus hotel — bring thousands of chilled descendants of the Vikings.

Hotel meals are part of the package. In the morning the sunlit beaches are wall-to-wall tan and bikinis. At noon it empties magically. Everybody's off to the dining room.

In the afternoon it fills again and stays that way until the sun dips into the mainland of Spain.

Poor Ulysses the most shipwrecked sailor in history. Calypso came from a good family — her father was Atlas who holds up the sky.

During his nine years with the nymph he couldn't stop talking about the wife he left in Ithaca. A poor line of chatter over candlelight and wine.

Calypso asked advice of Athene, the goddess of wisdom who said wisely 'Unload the bum.'

So Calypso showed him a forest where he could build a raft.

The Greek and his crew sailed away into the sunrise. A born loser to the end."

POSTCARD

Our Man in the Mediterranean — living it up on spiced lamb and stuffed grape leaves — is cruising in the wake of Ulysses, the gregarious Greek. This is his second dispatch.

"The new Golden Odyssey turned to the rising sun today to find the Spanish island of Mallorca. Is this Homer's Ogygia? Island home of Calypso, the navel of the sea, in the remote West?"

"Ulysses, that hard luck Greek sailor, spent 20 years getting home to Ithaca. Nine of those years were on Ogygia with the nymph Calypso. (How did he explain that at home?)

"Palma, the main town, is international — in the summer season, the airport lands and sends off more airplanes than any place in the world. Cheap air fares keeps Mallorca booming. And, in the sun-warmed sidewalk cafes, you hear English and Dutch, all the Scandinavian languages and a sprinkle of Japanese."

"San Miguel is the beer. Made in Spain under license from the parent company in the Philippines. They bring it to you ice cold. You can sit and watch the world go by while salt sea air steals up the ancient streets."

"Twenty years ago, Mallorca fathers gave their precious farming land to favorite sons. The younger kids inherited the useless beaches."

"So today the meek have inherited the sand, every beach topped by million dollar hotels. A moral for all of us, but I'm not sure just what."

"The Golden Odyssey dropped 460 passengers and 200 crewmen on Palma. Filled the pedestrian shopping streets and the stores that sell laces, wrought iron, bric-a-brac and glassware."

"Big buy in Palma are the famous Mallorca pearls. (However, they're priced better in Madrid.)"

Sieckman, Sock Gain Plains Win

By RANDY EICKHOFF
Star Sports Writer

Tom Sieckman and Larry Sock returned to Nebraska golf with a vengeance, firing a blistering best-ball 61 over the rugged Pioneers Golf Course Sunday to claim the Great Plains championship.

"We were really fired up for this tournament," Sieckman said following the victory. "Neither of us played any golf in tournaments this spring (in Oklahoma) and all we talked about all spring was how we wanted to win here."

At first, however, it seemed as if the duo would finish in second or third place. During the first day's round Saturday, Sieckman and Sock were two strokes behind Dan Bahensky and Ken Deckert.

"The weather made a big difference," Sieckman said.

"Yesterday, we had a late tee time and finished the last three holes in the dark. That made us take a few more putts than we would have."

Individually, Sieckman fired a 63 over the 6,308 yard par 71 course. Sock came through with an individual 67, collecting a couple of birdies that lowered the best-ball score to a 61 coupled with the 67 on Saturday for a two-day total of 128. Deckert and Bahensky fired 65s for both days.

After the first nine holes on Sunday, Sieckman and Sock had picked up one stroke on Bahensky and Deckert, but both rocketed their drives into the treacherous rough on No. 10. Both, however, made great recovery shots to claim birdies.

From that point on, they could do no wrong. On No. 14, a normal 289-yard par four but playing roughly 310 with the tee box moved back, Sieckman rifled his drive to within five yards of the green and chipped in for an eagle. The feat was made even more difficult by the heavy wind blowing straight into his face.

"I hit that ball about as good as I could," Sieckman said. "I was playing into the wind, too. I took the pin out for my second shot and chipped in about twelve feet out."

Sock said the only trouble they seemed to have was with the greens — slower and grainy.

"We played good the whole tournament," Sock said. "We were a little down about yesterday's game, but we came back strong today."

"No bogeys helps," he grinned. "Plus we had a few good bounces. That cut our putting down. We had a lot less putts than we did yesterday."

"This course is a lot easier than Holmes," Sieckman said. "It's shorter so if you hit the ball good . . . straight and far, then it's easier. But that's rough . . ."

"I think the greens were a little difficult," he said. "They're awful grainy and bumpy. You have to be real careful when you read them."

"We were really lucky," Sock said. "Neither of us had any bogeys. That way, one of us was sure of getting a birdie and wouldn't put any pressure on the other guy. The pressure really mounts when your partner bogeys and you're fighting to save par. We didn't have to do that."

Sooners Advance

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Pre-tournament favorite Oklahoma kept its NCAA Midwest Regional baseball title hopes alive Sunday evening by beating Texas A&M, 6-4, and advancing to Monday's finals against Tulsa. The Aggies were eliminated from the tournament.

In order to take the title, however, the Sooners must beat Tulsa twice on Monday. The Golden Hurricane took a 4-3 victory in 14 innings against the Sooners in Sunday's first game, sending the Sooners into the loser's bracket game against Texas A&M.

If Tulsa wins Monday, they will be the champion. But if Oklahoma wins, another final game will be needed to break the tie.

'Breaks' Give Unser Indy 500 Victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bob Unser, a raw-boned and hungry veteran, took advantage of a rapid series of breaks on a hot and humid Sunday and won his second Indianapolis 500 amid the mass confusion of a thunderstorm that stopped the race 65 miles short of completion.

It's a shame," Dallenbach said. "The car was running like a dream, and I'm sure we could have gone the rest of the way like that."

The race was marred only by one serious accident, which left driver Tom Sneva with serious burns over his hands, face, chest and legs. It originally was planned to transfer him to the University of Michigan Burn Center at Ann Arbor, Mich., but doctors decided late Sunday his injuries did not warrant it.

The rain came suddenly and hard, slowing the cars to a snail's pace and turning the world's most famous and prestigious auto race into a comedy of errors, and officials ended it at 435 miles on the 174th of 200 scheduled laps.

Unser, 41, from Albuquerque, N.M., joined his younger brother Al as a two-time winner of the Indy, cut short for only the fourth time in its 59-year history and one in which favored A.J. Foyt failed to reach his dream of a fourth victory.

Unser, who won this $1 million event seven years ago, said he was driving on the backstretch on the 171st lap when former driving great Dan Gurney, who built and prepared the winning car, messaged him it was raining on the front part of the track.

Morning Briefing

A Sports Roundup

Bill Hord, former regional editor, has been named sports editor of The Omaha World Herald, while Gene Beran takes over as regional editor effective Sunday. Hord succeeds Howard Brantz who will have a new title as associate sports editor. Hord is a former sports editor of the North Platte Telegraph.

American League president Lee MacPhail announced that the three-day suspension and $250 fine against Cleveland Indians player-manager Frank Robinson has been upheld and would begin Monday.

Three early games have been rescheduled by the Montreal Expos as part of doubleheaders during the second half of the season. The games were scheduled for July 20, Aug. 1 and Sept. 8.

Bill Silverberg of Eastern New Mexico University was named the 1975 Track Coach of the Year by members of the Track Coaches Association of the NAIA.

World record holder John Powell was beaten by Pentti Kahma of Finland in the discus at the California Relays. Powell, who's record toss is 226-8, did only 216-11 Saturday. Three other meet records were set. The Southern California 440 relay team was clocked in 39.3. Joni Huntley of the Oregon Track Club set a record in the high jump with a 6-1 leap and Cindy Poor of San Jose added a meet mark in the 880 with a time of 2:06.9.

Maryland police are holding two men on horse stealing charges in connection with an unsuccessful attempt to extort $20,000 from the owner of the thoroughbred race horse.

Foreign attempts one of the toughest tests of his career when he carries 136 pounds in the $100,000-added Metropolitan Handicap at Aqueduct on Monday.

Midland coach Joanne Bracker announced the school will host two basketball camps for girls this summer on the Midland campus from June 1-6 and June 8-14.

All-American Adrian Dantley, a Notre Dame junior, said he has withdrawn his name as a hardship case in the NBA draft.

The St. Louis Cardinals announced they will switch their football training camp to Eastern Illinois University at Charleston this summer.

The Olympic officials in charge of eligibility have just seven months to decide who are the amateurs who can compete in the 1976 Winter Games in Innsbruck.

Manual Orantes of Spain won the men's singles title at German International Tennis Championships for the second time by beating Czechoslovakia's Jan Kodes, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, 4-6 and 6-1.

Mrs. Robert Lehmann, owner of Preakness winner Master Derby, said the horse will be entered in the $150,000-added Belmont Stakes, June 7. Mrs. Lehmann decided to enter Master Derby in the Belmont rather than the Ohio Derby.

Although A. J. Foyt didn't pick up his fourth win in the Indy 500, his name went into the books as the all-time mileage leader in the classic. After 174 laps or 435 miles Sunday, Foyt had logged 6,402½ miles in 18 consecutive races, records for distance and attempts. Foyt placed third in the million-dollar race.

Richard Petty won the World 600 stock car race in Charlotte, N.C., in a record-speed, one-lap victory. Petty's average speed in the $176,530 event was 145.327 to move him to the winner's circle and pick up his $27,190 share of the purse.

Carner Gains Win Crowns In Playoff Decided

By The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Joanne Carner, last year's LPGA player of the year, won the $40,000 American Defender Golf Classic Sunday, beating Judy Rankin on the first hole of a sudden death playoff.

Mrs. Carner sank a six-foot putt after posting a final total of 3-under-par 69 while Mrs. Rankin, who closed with a 71, missed a 10-footer on the extra hole and lost her third playoff in four tournaments.

Daniel, making his first tourney start, drove in five Florida State runs and homered in the fifth inning.

Also advancing to the college World Series June 6 in Omaha, Neb., were South Carolina in the South Atlantic division, Seton Hall in the Northeast, Texas in the South Central, Arizona State in the Rocky Mountain, and Fullerton State in the West.

Michigan and East Michigan will continue a rain-shortened game for the Mideast title.

South Carolina beat North Carolina State 4-3. Hank Shadid had a two-run homer in the first for the Gamecocks, and right-hander Earl Bass, a junior, took over in the sixth to preserve the victory.

Arizona State came back to win the second game of a doubleheader with Washington State 5-1 after the Cougars had beaten the Sun Devils 8-7 in the first game.

Pepperdine nipped Fullerton State 5-4 in the first game of their doubleheader on Tom Ruegger's homer, but Fullerton State came back with a 6-4 victory to advance to the finals in Omaha.

Her best finish this year had been a second in the Karsten-Ping Open in Phoenix, Ariz.

"I played better in practice rounds this week than I've hit the ball in three years," she said.

Unser Finds Luck At His 13th Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "Luck" said Bobby Unser, "is everything. If you don't have luck on the racetrack, you can't win."

Appropriately Unser won Sunday's Indianapolis 500 on his 13th career start here, dodging a terrifying wreck, and then finding himself out in front when rain stopped the race at 435 miles.

"Luck controls everything we do in our lives," Unser said in a post-race interview. "I've always tried to have it on my side."

Unser who also won here in 1968, when he bested his current car owner, Dan Gurney, said he felt Providence guided him through the entire race.

"It turned out I was able to make pitstops at the best possible time and when Tom Sneva crashed in front of me on the 127th lap, I was somehow able to keep myself out of it," Unser said. "It was a helluva bad wreck. I got a little sideways coming into it, made a split-second decision to go low to miss it, and it fortunately was the right one."

"I don't know how close I was to the thing, but I know I came awfully close to being involved."

Sneva's misfortune also allowed Unser to build up his fuel mileage on the slower-speed yellow light following the wreck, to the point where he felt he had enough fuel left to outrun his closest pursuers, Johnny Rutherford and A.J. Foyt.

"Just in case it came to a dash at the end, I knew I was going to be able to race hard enough and fast enough to hold off anyone," he said.

Unser, who slogged across the finish line in a pouring rain at about 20 miles per hour, said, "I didn't know if I had to cross the finish line to win at that point. But I know it was a damn good thing to do."

Gordon Johncock, winner in the rain-curtailed 1973 race, never received the checkered flag.

Unser said he feels winning this race is the most important thing in any race driver's career. But he added, taking nothing away from this win, that it was still more of a thrill when I won the first time.

The victory was also a milestone for Gurney, who never made it to Victory Lane in his nine years here as a driver.

He was second twice.

"I have never forgiven Bobby for beating me in 1968," Gurney said jokingly. "But I can't tell you how much it means to me to finally be on the winning end of this thing."

Gurney who gave two victory kisses to the winner, said this might be the last appearance here for the Eagle that he designed four years ago.

Already on the drawing board is a radically-different machine that Unser is planning to drive here next year.

Dallenbach Wins Indy Lap Money

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Wally Dallenbach who led the Indianapolis 500-mile race Sunday for 96 laps before his engine blew won $14,400 in lap prize money officials at Indianapolis Motor Speedway said.

Steve Kraatz, Paris, N.J., was second twice.

Second to Dallenbach in lap money was three-time winner A.J. Foyt Jr. with $8,100. Other temporary leaders and their prize money were Bobby Unser $1,650; Gordon Johncock $1,200 and defending champion Johnny Rutherford $750.

Drivers earn $150 for each lap of the race they lead plus additional prize money for the order of finish.

NWU Trackmen To NCAA Meet

By United Press International

Woody Greeno, Nebraska Wesleyan track coach will take nine competitors who have qualified in 14 events to the NCAA Division III championships May 29-31 at Baldwin Wallace College in Berea, Ohio.

Cliff Karthausen who will participate in the 3-mile and 6-mile runs will lead the contingent. Karthausen placed third in the 3-mile a year ago.

I'm sure Karthausen will make it tough for them, especially in the six," Greeno said. "We were 12th out of 53 teams last year and we could equal that this year."

The Wesleyan trackmen won their 12th place finish with only five competitors last year.

Heat, Humidity Strike Fans

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Heat and humidity felled more than 100 spectators at the Indianapolis 500 Sunday, according to race officials, but otherwise it was an unusually safe, quiet race.

Only three race drivers required hospital treatment — including Tom Sneva, the most seriously injured. He was taken to Methodist hospital with burns on his hands, face, neck, arms and legs suffered when his car hit a wall in the second turn.

Indiana State Police said they arrested fewer than 10 persons — most for liquor violations.

The 90 per cent humidity and 85 degree heat made it the hottest race day since 1953 when the weather forced eight drivers out of the race, according to Dr. Thomas Hanna, director of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Hospital.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hatchetman Dave Schultz said his confidence had not been restored by the two key goals he scored Sunday as the Philadelphia Flyers walloped the Buffalo Sabres 5-1 in the fifth game of the National Hockey League Stanley Cup championship series.

The 26-year-old Schultz, the NHL's leading penalty taker with 472 minutes this past season, scored the first goal of the game as the Flyers built a 5-0 lead and went on to take a 3-2 advantage in the best-of-seven series.

"I know I haven't played well the last few games," said Schultz, who last week questioned his own ability and decried his lack of ice time. "That's why I was benched."

Someone asked the Flyers' husky winger if two goals in an important playoff game wasn't enough to prove to himself that he could play hockey as well as fight.

"I don't know that I played that much better, just because a couple of shots went in," said a somber Schultz.

The soundly beaten Sabres headed back to Buffalo, where Tuesday night they hope to stave off elimination by the defending champion Flyers.

If the Sabres can even the series again, the seventh,

Schultz Paces Flyers Past Buffalo and deciding, game is scheduled for Philadelphia Thursday night.

While Schultz was playing it cool in the Flyers' happy dressing room, Coach Fred Shero was busy watching films of his team's seemingly easy victory.

Shero refused to meet with newsmen after the game. He sent assistant coach Mike Nykoluk to the post-game interview.

Nykoluk said Shero was dissatisfied with the whole series.

"Something is missing, we're doing something wrong and we can't figure out what it is," said the assistant coach.

So right after the game Freddie went to view the tapes while the game is still fresh in his mind. Nykoluk added: "We're working hard, but we're not accomplishing as much as we should."

Buffalo goalie Gerry Desjardins, who appeared to have a chance at stopping all three of the Flyers' first period goals, was dressed and leaving the Sabres' locker room as reporters filed in.

"I felt good before the game," Desjardins said. "The first goal got away. It hit me and bounced back in."

Buffalo Coach Floyd Smith commented, "I said before that the first game I win here is going to be the last of the year. If Buffalo wins Tuesday to stay alive he'll get his chance to make good on his word Thursday night.

Shero gave the Flyers a 1-0 lead at 3:12 of the first period when the big winger who last week questioned his ability as a major league hockey player, took a rebound off the boards in the left faceoff circle and scored into the short side.

The Sabres didn't know it then, but it was the start of the first rout in this series. The Spectrum jinx struck again, leaving Buffalo with an 0-1-2 record on the Flyers' ice since the Sabres came into the league five years ago.

After Buffalo failed to score on a power-play opportunity in the first period, the Flyers increased their lead to 2-0. Terry Crisp shot on Buffalo goalie Gerry Desjardins the puck rebounding to Gary Dornhoefer deep along the right boards.

Headstone Marks Resting Place Of 'Darkie Rube'

By DEAN TERRILL

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — Few graves in all Nebraska are lonelier than that of one Rueben DeVrek.

He was a "colored man," as is noted on his tiny foot-long headstone. His resting place in the century-old Bower rural cemetery northeast of here will likely go unnoticed as usual this Memorial Day.

But those persons who still remember old "Darkie Rube" say he was a man of many friends.

The only black man in Jefferson County at the time, he chose to make his home here after passing through as a 9-year-old boy. Oldtimers say he often told of being among a group of slaves fleeing the South via the famed "underground railway."

"Rube went on to Canada with the group, but used to say he liked this area so well that he came back to live," reflected Mrs. Theresa Aasen of Fairbury, who served for years as secretary of the cemetery association. "He didn't have a nickel but was a friend of every kid around, including me."

Growing up in Bower community, Mrs. Aasen also recalls the "sort of a sheepherder's wagon" in which the older lived during the summer. He worked for a number of neighborhood farm families.

Although many of his young friends had never seen another Negro, Rube's race mattered little to them one way or the other. The jovial Mrs. Aasen, 77, said "his color never even came to mind, just his kindness."

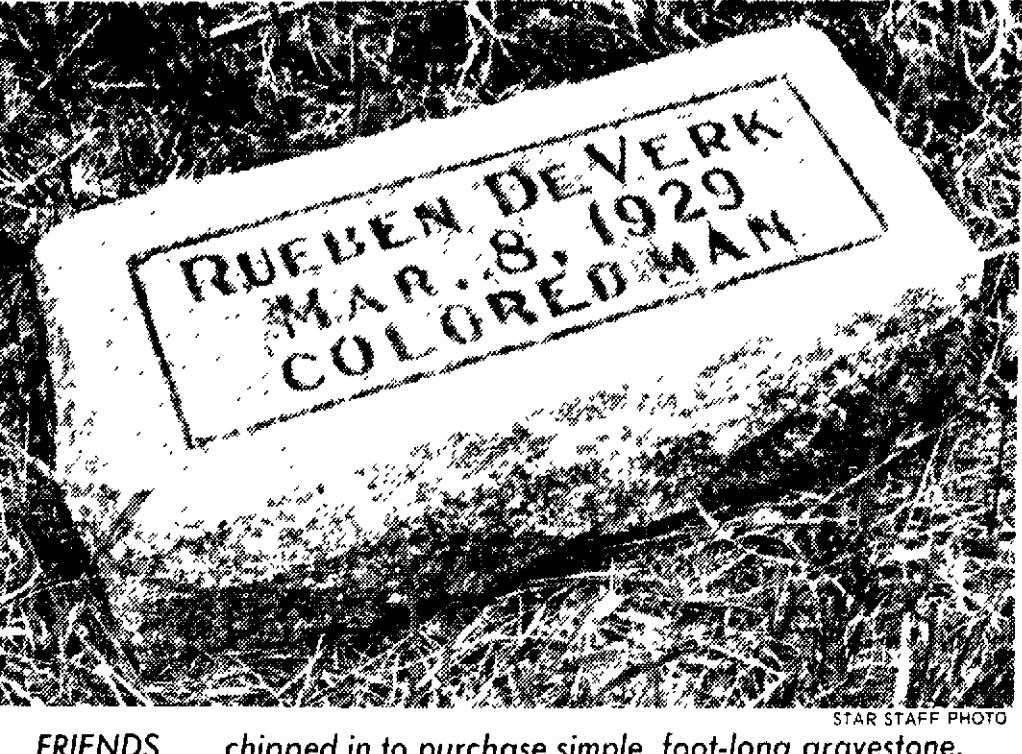

Clint Chirnside of Fairbury, who is now the association secretary, best remembers Rube as "a small fellow who wouldn't hurt anybody." He also recalled that he headquartered at the old Rosenberger place.

Lacking even one relative, Rube was buried in the quiet little cemetery in 1929. Friends pitched in enough money to buy the small but neatly-lettered marker.

And although some today might object to the stone's unusual lettering, it was not intended to be derogatory. Old Rube's funeral was a strong testimony to that.

Mrs. Aasen remembers the day well:

"So many people showed up that there wasn't room for everyone. Rube was that kind of man."

Potential For Drip Irrigation Said Vast

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Farm Editor

Drip irrigators in Nebraska will triple their acreage this year, according to Dr. Dean Manbeck who is working with the new form of irrigation at the University of Nebraska.

Triple really isn't very much. We are leaping from two acres to perhaps six or seven acres under drip irrigation. This may be the tip of the iceberg because the potential is tremendous.

Drip irrigation, also known as trickle irrigation, apparently began when an Israeli farmer noticed a tree near a drip in an irrigation pipe did much better than other trees in his orchard.

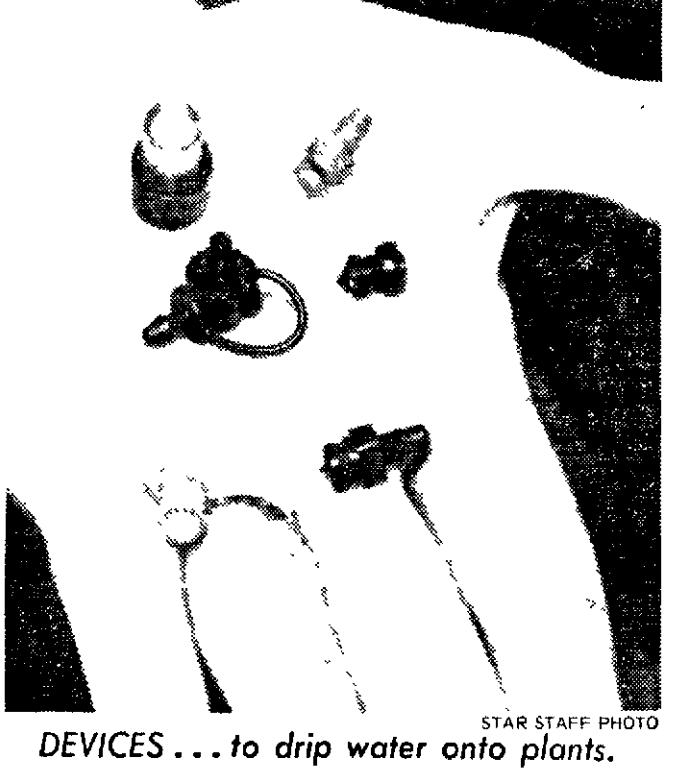

The farmer then began to rig devices to drop water on trees instead of spraying them or flooding the ground around the trees.

Drip Spawns A Flood

This little drip has spawned a flood of interest. A worldwide convention of drip and trickle irrigators met in California last year to compare notes and produce a three-inch thick book of data that sells for $10.00.

Manbeck has acquired a cardboard box filled with various kinds of little plastic gadgets designed to reduce a flow of water to a drip or mist-like spray.

Some of the gadgets will figure in his experiments this year. He will try them on a lawn, some sweet corn and a dozen or so vegetable crops using both underground and above ground efforts to get water to the crop without wasting any.

DEVICES... to drip water onto plants.

The gadgets range from a little octopus-like affair that can water a tree from its many arms, to emitters so tiny a dozen or more will fit in an ordinary salt shaker.

One sophisticated thingamajig measures the amount of water in the soil of a planter, then meters the amount needed automatically.

The cost can range from $10 for the plant and tree waterer outfits down to a dime for the tiny emitters which are simply forced into a plastic pipe.

"Just about every imaginable principle of physics and engineering is represented in this box of emitters. Scientists have tried all sorts of things, but the idea is the same — to reduce the flow of water without plugging up the tiny holes in the emitter," Manbeck said.

Manbeck sees some large-scale possibilities for his box of toys: but for the immediate future, he suggested the drip irrigation potential for gardens and lawns could cut city water bills tremendously.

Garden Stores Could Sell

"I think a garden center or plant store might want to train a man to install these systems and water a tree from its many arms, to emitters so tiny a dozen or more will fit in an ordinary salt shaker.

One problem is that the water has to be super clean as it goes into the system or it will plug up the tiny outlets, fouling up the whole system.

If these and other unforeseen problems can be solved, drip irrigation could provide one answer to the problem of declining amounts of irrigation water by rationing out individual drinks for each plant.

The cost ranged from a low of $2.24 a bushel to a high of $4.07

With wheat expected to be worth around $3 a bushel this fall, some will lose $1.07 and some make 76¢. But even $3 is a mighty big if.

Problems are many, however. Mice and ground squirrels like to drink from the drip systems, often chewing holes, and Manbeck even observed a cricket insert his feeler into the tiny hole, possibly to get a drink.

I think a garden center or plant store might want to train a man to install these systems and

"Just about every imaginable principle of physics and sell them for lawns and gardens. And there should be a good market for the individual tree and planter watering devices," he suggested.

Manbeck also thinks the underground systems may have a practical application in keeping the median in the streets green at considerably less cost than present systems involving buried pipes coupled with sprinklers.

"I tried a strip in a lawn last year with a single buried pipe that made about four feet green. I intend to bury more pipe this year and do some real research on the idea. We will also try to bury some pipes in fields at different depths to see just where we ought to put the systems," he said.

Used Where Water Expensive

The extensive use of the drip irrigation systems has been in orchards and occasionally on field crops in areas where the cost of irrigation water is very high.

Problems are many, however. Mice and ground squirrels like to drink from the drip systems, often chewing holes, and Manbeck even observed a cricket insert his feeler into the tiny hole, possibly to get a drink.

One problem is that the water has to be super clean as it goes into the system or it will plug up the tiny outlets, fouling up the whole system.

If these and other unforeseen problems can be solved, drip irrigation could provide one answer to the problem of declining amounts of irrigation water by rationing out individual drinks for each plant.

The cost ranged from a low of $2.24 a bushel to a high of $4.07. With wheat expected to be worth around $3 a bushel this fall, some will lose $1.07 and some make 76¢. But even $3 is a mighty big if.

There are a lot of factors involved — differing land values, different yields of grain per acre, some farmers have all new machinery, increasing expense per acre if depreciation is figured in, but a man with old machinery may spend more for parts or fuel.

No matter who or how the figuring is done, farming is an expensive business these days.

Farmers needn't feel like orphans, however, because the same can be said for any other business.

Farmers who are pumping water from a reuse pit or a pond below their feedlot for irrigation might want to consider getting a water right, particularly if any of the water in the pit or pond migrates across a property line before it gets to your place.

The State Department of Water Resources has a policy of not requiring such a permit on these pits and pollution control ponds but technically it could demand one.

Having such a right could give you an advantage in case a dispute over water supplies should crop up. Cost is $10 plus paperwork plus a map which can cost anywhere from $20 to $300 or you might get it free from your Natural Resource District if it has a qualified man available to make it.

Holiday Weekend Traffic Mishaps Claim 3 In State

Glen H. Sholes, 25, of O'Neill, reported he was going west when the girl darted in front of his vehicle. Sholes said he hit the brakes and swerved but was unable to avoid striking the child.

The victim was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Varner Hike of Bellevue. Uehling said the family was visiting Christine's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Herold of Inman.

Karen G. Goeschel, 26, of 2130 W. Q, a passenger in the Jones car, suffered a scalp wound and was listed in satisfactory condition at Lincoln General Hospital.

Other passengers in the Jones car — Raymond J. Tvrly, 29, 1115 So. 14th; and Pamela S. Jones, 22, 1215 Arapahoe — were treated for injuries at Lincoln General, then released.

Deputy sheriffs said Carol W. Jones was driving south on So. 68th when she attempted to pass a car driven by Ervin E. Williams, 64, of Firth. She lost control of the vehicle, which then struck the Williams car, flipped over and rolled into the ditch.

She was thrown from the car, then crushed underneath it, deputy sheriffs said.

Williams and his wife, Lucile, were uninjured.

The death brought Nebraska's Memorial Day weekend traffic toll to three.

An eight-year-old girl was killed earlier Sunday when she was struck by a car as she walked across U.S. 20 at Inman in Holt County.

State Patrolman Larry

Uehling of O'Neill said Christine Hike of Bellevue was dead on arrival at an O'Neill hospital.

He said the driver of the car, mix with the soft wheats of Europe, Russia and many other areas to make good-quality bread.

Recent badly needed showers aided wheat conditions in western Nebraska, but the subsoil is still very dry. Rain must continue if there is to be a wheat crop.

The prices for the rest of the summer will be tied to exports, weather and possible Russian sales.

They will be subject to sudden rises and drops as supply factors change and speculators watch the demand side of the market.

My favorite true rumor of the week is that there are fires in Russia. The swamps and peat bogs are burning because of extremely hot, dry weather.

That just has to mean the Russians are having trouble with their wheat crop.

If the trouble is bad enough,

the Russians may come over to buy some of our wheat.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
